Mr. Munsey—He Pays Money in Satchels
The 150,000 Light Bulb Dangerous Pearls

Current Events

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright, 1924, by Star Company)

OWNERS of little newspapers rub their eyes, stand and gaze, and ask: "Where does dear, kind Mr. Munsey get all the money he pays us?"

Again the big heart and pocketbook have been opened and Mr. Munsey has bought the New York Evening Mail for two million dollars. Real, 100 per cent. AMERICAN dollars.

THE MAIL will be combined with the Evening Telegram, which Mr. Munsey owns already. And Mr. Munsey, Journalistic Gigantcus, will shape up as follows:

He will own the New York Herald in the morning, the Sun and Globe in the afternoon, the Telegram and Mail, also in the afternoon.

THAT won't be the end. Frank Munsey has two passions that rule him—CONSOLIDATION and PERFECTION.

His Sun and Globe will be made perfection. His Telegram and Mail will be made perfection. Then Old Consolidation will step in and say: "Frank, no use having TWO perfect things absolutely alike; let's consolidate." Then Mr. Munsey will own the New York Herald in the morning, and in the evening the Sun-Globe-Mail-Telegram.

DON'T sigh and say it's wrong for a man to kill newspapers. When a newspaper is chronically for sale, the best thing you can do is kill it.

And then great-hearted newspaper owners like Frank Munsey love advertisers that keep them going. When they combine newspapers they save advertisers the cost of buying duplicate circulation.

IF YOU take one newspaper offering 200,000 circulation and combine it with another newspaper offering 150,000 circulation, and the combined circulations slimmed down to 265,000, the advertiser knows that he has been buying duplicate circulation, PAYING for what he DIDN'T GET. And he says to himself: "Frank Munsey is my true friend."

OWNERS of little newspapers to whom Mr. Munsey distributes his gold, owners of big newspapers glad to see Mr. Munsey cut away the underbrush of journalism, and advertisers all unite to say: "Oh! Frank A. Munsey, live forever."

THESE are the days when money is distributed generously and mysteriously. Mr. Anderson, head of the Anti-Saloon League in New York, tells of "Mysterious Mr. King," who called upon him, said he admired him and gave him $25,000 in cash. But he doesn't know where Mr. King is, or WHO he really is, or whether he is still alive or not.

AND MR. FALL, Secretary of the Interior, who leased away valuable oil lands that had been reserved for the Navy, testified that he got $100,000 from Mr. Ned McLean, of the Washington Post. Then, on second thoughts, he testified, as did Mr. McLean, that the latter gave him

FIGHT TO KEEP PNEUMONIA FROM FALL

Central Figure In Oil Scandal May Not Be Able to Face Inquisitors

Washington, Jan. 26.—Albert B. Fall, central figure in the Teapot Dome oil scandal, may not be able to appear before the Senate committee Monday. He remains confined to his bed and is being attended by a trained nurse. Dr. William Mercer Sprigg was called in today by Dr. John Wharton.

"Mr. Fall is a very sick man," said Dr. Wharton. "His heart action is bad—in fact, he is worse. His condition was aggravated by his trip to Washington, especially the bronchial trouble. But there is some improvement in this.

"He now has no temperature, in fact it is slightly subnormal, but he cannot leave his bed and we cannot state before Monday whether he will be able to appear at that time before the Senate committee. He certainly would not do so today in his present condition."

President Orders Teapot Oil Probe

Washington, Jan. 26 (I.N.S.).—Teapot Dome, with all its ugly aspects, was definitely thrust today into the approaching political campaign.

With the Democrats planning to make it one of their chief issues, and the White House indicating that criminal action is to follow, the leasing of the great naval oil reserve by Ex-Secretary of the Interior Fall, Senator Hiram Johnson, Republican, of California, the only avowed candidate against President Coolidge,

2 HARVARD BOOTLEGS FINED

"They Are a Disgrace to University," Says Judge Stone, Refusing Clemency Plea

Two Harvard Law School juniors were found guilty of bootlegging in East Cambridge Court today, were fined by Judge Arthur Stone and, in addition, were told in scathing terms that Harvard bootleggers are no better than the rank and file of this vocation.

The students were Fred S. Herrington and Roland T. Kinney, both of No. 28 Walter Hastings Hall. When prohibition agents swooped down on their quarters they found more than two gallons of whiskey which they alleged the students had offered for sale.

Herrington was fined $100 and Kinney escaped with a fine of half that amount.

Attorney Baker, appearing for the students, asked that a plea of nolle be accepted. He declared the boys were of good family and would be dropped from the university if they were convicted.

"The plea of nolle will not be accepted," said the court.

"These students are nothing but common, ordinary bootleggers such as the liquor squad brings in here every day. They are a disgrace to Harvard, especially in view of the fact that they are law students."

The Harvard faculty has not yet acted on the case of the culprits, but on the campus it is generally believed they will be summarily dismissed from the university.

Lawyer Bresnahan Tried to Victimize Him, Judge Stone Declares

Declaring in open court that an attempt had apparently been made by a member of the bar to victimize him, Judge Arthur Stone in East Cambridge Court today, declared he would report the transaction, involving Stephen Bresnahan, a Boston attorney, to the Massachusetts Bar Association for action.

Bresnahan, who was in court at the time he was denounced from the bench, had presented an assignment paper for the signature of the judge.

DR. LATTIMORE AND "JOKE" PRESCRIPTION

Here is Dr. Andrew B. Lattimore leaving his office after a strenuous day for himself and his patients, little realizing that he had just betrayed himself as a quack to a Boston American investigator. Below is the prescription that the doctor wrote out for the "disease" with which he told the perfectly healthy investigator he had contracted.

FAIR WEATHER IS PROMISED FOR SUNDAY

Gale That Broke the Weather Man's Measuring Machine Is Blowing Itself Out

After serving up a job-lot of weather that included about everything he had in his category, Old Man Winter today promised to behave himself and for Sunday fair and colder weather is predicted.

The gale which followed on the heels of Friday's snow and rain will blow itself out by tonight, says the forecaster, and the northwest storm warnings which have been up along the Atlantic coast from the Delaware breakwater to Boston will be lowered at Sunset today.

The gale of the past twelve hours reached a velocity of seventy-two miles an hour along the coast, the third bad blow in a week's time. Just how long the fair weather predicted for Sunday is to last is not announced.

There is no knowing but higher readings might have been made were it not for an accident to the machine on top of the Federal Building in which a pin broke and put the machine out of business.

Watch This Monday.

Resorts to Trickery in Order to Hold Healthy Man as Patient

TRAPPED BY PROBER'S FEIGNED ILLNESS

Makes Ludicrous Hocus-Pocus to Show Healthy Patient How Sick He Is

Andre B. Lattimore, M. D., whom Boston American readers meet today resembles the manager of a string of colored fighters.

He is dark and burly, standing a trifle more than six feet tall with shoulders so broad he would have to move sideways into a patrol wagon.

Like Harry Wills, the colored heavyweight fighter, who tells the public he would have a chance against Jack Dempsey in a prize ring, Dr. Lattimore is light on his feet.

Wills is known as the "Brown Panther." Lattimore one might call a "Pink Panther." He is as shifty as Wills but lighter hued.

You meet Lattimore today not as a fight manager but as a quack.

He is today's subject in the American's investigation of "Doctors" who are proving a menace to the public health, an investigation which is heartily endorsed by members of the Massachusetts State Medical Association and other reputable practitioners.

"Promoting Peace, Outlawing War"

Very Pretty, but It Wouldn't Happen

Copyright, 1924, Star Co.

An earnest gentleman writes from the Hotel Tetley, Riverside, California, to the "Today" column of the Boston American, as follows:

"My wife this morning after reading your column, exclaimed, 'Isn't it a shame that such a great man should use his abilities to ridicule an offer like Mr. Bok made, for promoting peace and outlawing war.'"

It would be a shame, if there were any ridiculing, or any real prospect of promoting peace or outlawing war.

Unfortunately, Mr. Bok's offer, well meant, only resulted in digging up the deeply buried corpse of the League of Nations and offering that as a brand NEW idea—after the American people had buried it with seven million votes to spare.

"Promoting peace and outlawing war" would be beautiful; promoting health and outlawing diseases would be beautiful also. But there is no sense in chasing a will-o'-the-wisp or investing effort on cash in a mirage.

The League of Nations, which some grave-diggers dug up and offered to Mr. Bok for cash, would PROMOTE war and DISCOURAGE peace, as far as this country is concerned.

It would drag us into the affairs of Europe, make us responsible for their wars and their bills—that's what Europe wants and ALL THAT EUROPE WANTS.

Ask any Englishman, Frenchman or Italian, acquainted with the facts, "What do you want from the United States? Do you want our advice? Do you want our friendly SYMPATHY? Or do you want our CASH and our MEN—in case you need them?"

If the man you question replies truthfully he will say, "NO THANKS, NO ADVICE, NO SYMPATHY; we have plenty of both. What we want is MEN and MONEY. We should like to have the United States in the league because we know you have plenty of money and plenty of men.

"We got ten billions of cash from you and three millions of men once before. We don't forget that."

That's what the League of Nations really MEANS to Europe.

The wife of the gentleman of Riverside, California, is assured that if the League of Nations meant promoting peace and outlawing war this newspaper would be for it.

The way to promote peace and outlaw war is for the United States to set the good example. Keep peace here, keep out war by always being ready for it, with plenty of flying machines and submarines.

Remember that there are sixteen hundred million people on this earth. A thousand millions of them are not far from the savage state. Of the remaining six hundred millions five hundred millions are ready to fight for what they want if they think they can win the fight.

We are only twelve thousand years from the Stone Age. We are fifty thousand years away from real civilization.

Here and there where little civilized cases occur on the globe they should be carefully protected.

And the United States especially should concentrate its energies HERE, keep away from European entanglements and promote peace by setting the good example.

War will be outlawed only by education and by the lapse of time.

Exposure of Quacks

Boston American Will Do All It Can to Protect the Public Against Fake Doctors

The Boston American and the Boston Advertiser have been engaged in exposing the fake doctors and the fake fortune-tellers. These two classes of frauds are among the most cruel which that queer combination of credulity and dishonesty in human nature can produce.

Ordinarily a thief steals only the money he gets, but these fakers are worse. They not only steal the money, but they inflict infinitely greater harm on the minds and the bodies of their victims.

The fake doctor misleads you concerning the character of your illness and prolongs it and often greatly increases it, either by giving you improper medicine or laying out ignorantly an improper regime nor by preventing you from seeking intelligent assistance.

A fake fortune-teller excites the weak-minded credulity of his victims and inspires them in a course of conduct which is often not only injurious to the mind and the fortunes and the body of the victim, but to their families and even to their friends.

We know a man in this community whose mother was greatly excited by these soothsayers and fortune-tellers and led to a course of conduct exceedingly injurious both to herself and to her family.

This man employed a detective to follow his mother and learn where she was going to receive her harmful excitement.

In each case, on discovering the faker who was advising her, it was only necessary to threaten him with exposure in order to make him refuse to give the obsessed woman another reading.

But her son soon found that there were so many other fakers in the city that it would take a year to run them all down, and by that time the mother could go back to the first one who might have forgotten her and thus inadvertantly might give her another seance.

Unoccupied women at a certain period of their lives are the easy victims of these fakers.

The Boston American is going to do all it can to protect them from themselves and to protect their families from an overdose of these fake plagues.

Liquor and the High School

One of the results of the New England Citizenship Conference meetings at Boston has been the determination to carry the campaign against the use of liquor into the preparatory schools.

While we believe that a very great deal of wilful exaggeration of the use of liquor by high school children has been indulged in by sensationalists and by those who want to make the Eighteenth Amendment seem to fail, yet there always has been some improper use of liquor and other disobedience of law among high school children. Anything that can bring home to them the evil of it is worth while.

LISTEN, WORLD! -:- By Elsie Robinson

HOW loudly we bewail the Great Pleasures we have missed in life. And how little attention we pay to the Greatest Pleasures which are ours for the taking.

The trouble is that we start out with the wrong idea of pleasure. We think it must come in the form of Shining New Experience. Through travel or romance or fame or business success. Through some spectacular turn which life will take, landing us plump in the midst of joy and content. Then life doesn't take a turn. Instead, it plods right along in the same old path, with the thrill of it oozing out of it bit by bit. Horribly disappointing, isn't it? We feel cheated. We are sure that everything would have been different if our dreams come true.

But everything wouldn't have been different. For by its very nature happiness isn't to be found in spectacular turnings or great adventures. It's your inward reaction which does the trick and not the somersaults Fate may turn.

Look back at your own life. When were you happiest? Was it the night of the big banquet on which you had counted so much? Was it when you went to New York, or the afternoon Dick proposed, or the time you pulled off that deal in copper? No, Queer thing, but the time you should have felt more elated somehow fell flat.

Whereas on the most ordinary occasions, for no reason whatever, joy wells in you like a tide. That night you and Bill rustled a midnight supper out on the kitchen table, or that day you and Edith hiked through the wet Spring woods. Fall evenings coming home through the smoky dusk with the leaf fires flickering along the streets. Spring mornings when you waken at that first gypsy smell which tells the turning of the year. The leap of pleasure from the simplest things—a hearty handshake, a spray of flowers on a garden wall, the merry caper of a little dog, the tingle of the wind across your face—the crackle of the fire on a rainy night.

These are the very warp and woof of living joy. They are so common and so simple that they're never far away. If only we could realize this! What vain regrets and struggles we would save ourselves!

Needs Cribs and Mattress

Editor Helping Hand:

Can you locate a crib and mattress for a dear little baby who is obliged to sleep in a baby carriage which is too short and cramps his little legs. It will be an act of the greatest kindness.

MRS. R. L.

A Godsend

Editor Helping Hand:

I am writing to thank you for the two dollars. I wrote to I. I. M. and thanked him. It was a godsend to me, for I am not able to find work, and when I got that I was down to my last cent. I was so relieved that I sat down and cried.

MRS. E. B.

Needs Further Assistance

Editor Helping Hand:

Is there anyone who would be willing to give a little further assistance to a family whose name you sent me. I carried the mother of this family a warm heavy coat, and found them to be really in need. Her husband came a year ago from St. John, N. B., obtained work, and later brought her and the seven children down. He had been suffering from headaches for some time, and delayed going to a doctor until it was found that he had a brain tumor. He was operated on three times, and died after the third operation. She is trying to support the family now by working in a candy factory during the night and caring for her children days. The eight of them have only two beds. The baby is sixteen months old, one about three and others all the way up to fourteen, the latter a girl. She can make anything over for them, she says. Cannot you find some generous person who offers a bed or two to send her way?

MRS. A. P. S.

Thank you for calling our attention to this family's needs.

Thanks From Mother

Editor Helping Hand:

I am Helen Mary's mother. I wish to thank you and all the others that so generously and promptly responded to her appeal. She has now received packages of clothing from Mrs. E. A. A. for my two little girls, from Mrs. M. M. for herself, from Mrs. C. H. for the two girls, Mrs. E. J. came out to see me Sunday and brought clothing for the little girls and myself and also some toys for the children and a lot of nice groceries, which I needed very badly, as I could get only two days' work last week. I received the check for $3.35 that was sent me, and I wish to thank the anonymous donor again.

Box of Baby Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a box of baby clothes for a baby from two to six months old, and I would like the name of some deserving person. They are not all new, but there is lots of good wear in them yet. I also have a man's blue suit about size 40 that would do for any working man of that size, and also two pair of women's shoes, size 6, medium width.

M. Y.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. C. B., who will be grateful for the baby clothes, and of Mrs. F. E. R. for the other things.

Warm Winter Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I have some nice warm clothes I would like to give someone, a good Winter overcoat, a working suit, slip-on sweater, army shirts, all size 40 and shoes 8½, socks, collars and handkerchiefs.

MRS. L. W. P.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. F. E. R.

Outfit For Baby

Editor Helping Hand:

I wish to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 17th inst. and to thank you for furnishing me with the address of Mrs. H. A. S., the widow, who asked for clothes for her ten months' baby and for whom I promised a complete outfit. I thought it would interest you to know that with the assistance of a shopper of one of Boston's leading stores, I selected the following articles which today have been sent to this woman: one dress, one gertrude, one sweater, one pair shoes, two gowns, two pairs of pants, two,

DR. FRANK CRANE ON THE IMPOSITION OF MYSTERY

By Dr. Frank Crane

NOTHING so imposes upon the mind as what it does not understand.

Most of us are thoroughly convinced of our own ignorance, of the limitations of our own capacity, and if anything can be explained to us in simple terms, and we can grasp it thoroughly, we are not likely to think much of it.

When the magician on the stage is doing his trick, if he tells you he does it by the aid of the spirits, and prattles of thought transference, psychic waves, and other things that neither he nor you understand in the least, you are thrilled with that awe which he intends and for which you paid your money.

If on the contrary he tells you the plain truth, which is that his fingers were quicker than your eye, and the whole matter was one of mere dexterity, you feel that you have been cheated.

When the club ladies go to a lecture and listen to a pale young man discourse upon "The Thingness of the What," and he showers them with incoherent ideas even more incoherently expressed, they feel that they have been vastly entertained and instructed.

It is difficult for a work on philosophy to gain great vogue if it is lucidly written and anybody can tell what it means. Somehow we have an inborn contempt for what we can understand.

When the doctor comes to see you, if he tells you that all that is the matter with you is the stomach ache and all you need is a dose of paregoric, you don't think much of that doctor. What he said was nothing but common sense, and anybody would know that. But if he feels your pulse and examines your tongue and tests your blood and shakes his head, and finally declares that it looks very much to him as though it were a case of enteric metabolism of the lalipaloosa, you are inclined to think that there is a medicine man who certainly knows his business.

When the preacher explains to you in simple language just what is right and what is wrong and the common sense reasons why, he cannot be much of a preacher, but if he dilates upon the doctrine of metempsychosis and the mysteries of spiritual undulation and advises you to go through a lot of performances for which neither he nor you can see the slightest reason, and assures you that saving faith is faith in something you know nothing about, then he surely must be a most illustrious and reverend guide.

When the banker talks to you of your investments and makes it plain to you that you cannot possibly understand the intricacies of finance and had best leave the whole matter to him, you go away with a feeling that there is a man to trust, but if he makes the whole matter intelligible to you it leaves you with the impression that he cannot be much of a financier or he would not have talked so you could understand him.

One of the unknown laws is that if one knows a thing thoroughly and has imagination and skill of expression he can make another person see it as clearly as himself. Most people do not know things thoroughly, have little skill of expression and are deficient in imagination; they must keep up their reputation, however, and for this reason they use long words and talk a deal without saying anything.

Whenever any man makes any kind of a proposition to you, and winds up by saying that of course you cannot understand it, and that the best thing to do is to trust to him, you have fairly reasonable grounds for presuming either that he does not understand the matter himself or that he does not want you to understand it.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON MYSTERY OF SUN

By Garrett P. Serviss

"IN reference to the late eclipse, I have read statements that the sun has no material to supply its loss of heat by combustion, so that its continuing to give out heat with no decrease becomes a subject of wonder. But I think the answer is obvious. The sun moves at great speed through space, created immense friction, which produces electricity. This, I think, accounts for the seeming lack of material for combustion.—D. Mc C., G. A. R. Home, West Philadelphia."

Your idea is not in accord with the opinions of astronomers and physicists, who do not believe that the heat and light (and heat) may be radio-activity, such as is exhibited by the substance called radium. Let this be hardly more than a guess, for the fact is that very little is certainly known about the internal activity of the sun, and the other stars.

Even the suggestion that radio-activity is at the bottom of the sun's action does not throw much light on the mystery, since we are not able to explain radio-activity itself. We can only say that it is a natural process whereby the atoms of matter undergo changes which are attended by the production of radiant energy. Scientific knowledge is largely made up of explanations of this kind, which never reach beyond a certain limit, and which often, it must be confessed, are little more than temporary expedients, or technical formulae.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

LOVED BY A HISTORIAN

By Mark Stuyvesant

TODAY'S feminine progressives who feel that a career must take precedence over love and marriage will find interest and perhaps a new viewpoint in the story of a woman of the middle Seventeen-hundreds who gave up her career when it was at its height because her husband wished it.

Susanne C. Necker appears in the history of France as a patroness of letters—honored, courted, beloved. But records do not tell of her girlhood in the rectory of a none too well-to-do Swiss church where she helped to keep house for her father, the Reverend Mr. Churchod.

Adventure came into Susanne's life together with Edward Gibbon, the historian.

Gibbon, it appears, had become a convert to the Catholic faith while attending college in England. But Gibbon, pere, disapproving his son's action, sent him to the Churchod family, that he might come under the clergyman's influence. And while he lived at the rectory the youth and Susanne formed a precarious livelihood teaching girls in Geneva, later finding employment as governess in Paris. There she met Jacques Necker.

While mutual poverty delayed their marriage many years, the ambition and clear-sightedness of the remarkable woman so fired his energies that he rose from a humble position in a banking house to a responsible place in the world. Wealth and power came to him, and as he progressed Madame Necker's influence kept pace with his development, always increasing.

Not the least notable of Madame Necker's achievements was motherhood. Her only child was destined to become that rare character, Madame de Stael, whose work on the Roman Empire was to be unique among writings of all time, tell in love with Susanne, then beginning to give promise of the charm which later made her the toast of Paris.

But again Gibbon, pere, interfered, and the match was broken off.

After her father's death, Susanne opened a prosperous livelihood teaching girls in Geneva, later finding employment as governess in Paris. There she met Jacques Necker.

While mutual poverty delayed their marriage many years, the ambition and clear-sightedness of the remarkable woman so fired his energies that he rose from a humble position in a banking house to a responsible place in the world. Wealth and power came to him, and as he progressed Madame Necker's influence kept pace with his development, always increasing.

Not the least notable of Madame Necker's achievements was motherhood. Her only child was destined to become that rare character, Madame de Stael.

ROXBURY PHYSICIAN IS CAUGHT IN AMAZING HOCUS-POCUS

USES "ACID TEST" TO SHOW PROBER IS "DISEASED"

brick dwellings, dwellings which have seen their best day.

Lattimore is on the second floor, at the top of stairs leading up from a dark hallway.

A healthy investigator for this newspaper found Lattimore like the white members of his profession, a feather-tongued liar and a cheat.

In the rawest and crudest and withal the most humorous diagnosis performed by a quack to date Lattimore pronounced the investigator as diseased and then proceeded to "cure" him in a series of treatments for the modest fee of $2 a treatment.

HOCUS-POCUS

He keeps his finger nails polished to a rising-sun glitter with a buff that resembles nothing more in its delicate tint than a chorus girl's fleshings.

Moving them so the light would reflect them to their best advantage Dr. Lattimore addressed his caller. He said: "What is your name?"

Smith gave him a name. The doctor wrote it down.

"What seems to be the trouble?" he asked.

Smith, eyeing the play of light on the ever-moving finger nails said: "I don't know just what the trouble is doctor except that I've been running around a bit and feel sort of worn out. One of the members of an orchestra in town told me about you so I thought I'd better hop out and see you."

"Yes, I think I know who you mean," replied Lattimore gobbling the investigator's bait greedily. "And let me say, at once, that—"

Smith complied with the doctor's request and there followed the quickest quack examination on record.

Lattimore worked with a small oblong piece of window glass.

On it he took what might be likened to the steam from one's breath.

PINDS 'DISEASE'

Then from an eye dropper he let fall a drop of brown liquid and made a great show of examining what resulted.

So far as Smith could see nothing resulted but Lattimore after a hurried look said in a voice pitched to carry conviction:

"You've got it all right"

He named a disease.

Eyeing Smith he paused for a full moment then added in sepulchral tones:

"You see if it wasn't that the corpuscles would break up under the acid, but they don't, so that indicates—"

Smith appeared badly frightened.

"One doctor," he said. "I didn't think it was as bad as that.

"Well, I suppose the best thing to do is to get cured immediately."

If Lattimore were honest both in his diagnosis and his fee for a cure, he would be a blessing to the profession he presumes to embrace.

His business would be such that he would need more than the second floor of No. 19 Greenwich street, Roxbury.

But Lattimore is crude and like others who presume to something that might be mistaken for standing, Lattimore cannot resist the opportunity to "paint the lily."

At the door of his humble habitation he keeps posted during office hours a large placard on which he pins it is to open the portal when the bell sounds and murmur with great celerity to the caller that—

"The doctor is upstairs."

VAIN OVER NAILS

Whereupon the visitor moves upward in hesitating fashion the hall being of tunnel darkness, but eventually emits two balls of white which eventually prove to be eyeballs, and steers his course. After crudely bumping a papered wall at an unfooted for turn in the stairs he happens on the owner of the eyeballs and that is—

"Dr. Lattimore."

On Thursday, December 16, about 2:30 o'clock in the evening, an American investigator, who will be called Smith, came upon Dr. Lattimore in just such manner.

"Yes, sir," said that gentleman in the darkness, "come right this way."

He led the way into a shabby office in which an electric light proved semi-blinding to the investigator who had just navigated such midnight darkness.

Lattimore, dressed in black and with little show of ostentation, sat his well formed bulk into an oak swivel chair which groaned as he did so.

Swishing about he fumbled at some papers on his open roll top desk then wheeled about again to face his caller.

For the first time Smith noticed the doctor possesses a weakness. It is his finger nails.

The Bruno-like quack did not say whether he agreed with Smith's conclusions or not.

Instead he made a grand stand play for one administering to a man whose health had been guaranteed by reputable city physicians just a few days before.

He changed his mannerism entirely.

"Get up on the table," he barked.

For the first time Smith noticed an old-fashioned wood and leather doctor's examination table with the uprights at the foot to which can be strapped a victim's legs.

On the walls, curiously enough, he noticed at the same time crude prints, in cheap frames, which looked in bad taste against wall paper with pattern too pronounced.

Curious as to what might follow he obeyed the quack and crawled onto the table.

Lattimore made fast his legs then said:

"I'll look you over further."

He did considerable looking after which he gave Smith an intimate massage, a massage so vigorous the caller protested.

"That will be enough for now," said Lattimore finally. "Just get up and I will give you some medicines. I don't believe in giving the sort of local treatments most doctors do. Just sit down."

The doctor resumed his swivel chair and taking a prescription pad shook a fountain pen to one side and inscribed two prescriptions for his healthy caller.

One reads: "Two tablets every four or five hours until relieved of pain."

PRESCRIBES TABLETS

On the other is found, following the medicine prescribed: "One tablet dissolved in tablespoon of water four times a day."

"You will come twice a week," said the burly Lattimore, handing Smith the prescriptions. "You will find the directions for taking on each box."

"Two dollars," said Lattimore smiling with satisfaction.

Smith gave him two dollars and watched that sum vanish speedily.

The doctor arose. He played his long fingers on the cheap desk, drumming softly. "Come back in a couple of days," he said.

Then he bowed low and showed Smith to the dark path leading below.

At the door Smith found the Good Man Friday had departed.

It was past office hours no doubt and even on Thursday a "Friday" must eat. Smith found his way to the street and received on reflecting on the pomposity and fingernails of Andrew B. Lattimore, M. D., and the magic of his window glass diagnosis.

On Monday the American will reveal another quack and his methods.

January 25, 1924.

Editor of the Boston American:

The work you and your good paper are doing in rounding up the 'irregulars' is a great service, not only to the public at large, but also as a means of separating the 'chaff from the wheat'. You are simply following along the lines of the American Medical Association and in fact helping them in their endeavors to have none but legalized and qualified men and women in the legitimate practice of medicine.

Very truly yours,

a check for $100,000, but he didn't cash it.

NOW COMES Mr. Doheny, one of the ablest business men of the country, who testified that he lent his old friend Mr. Fall $100,000, which he gave him in cash in a suit case, and Sinclair lent, or gave, Mr. Fall $25,000, some in bonds. "Easy money?" Yes, very.

MR. FALL says, "I am a sick man." That isn't because he couldn't hire a doctor, apparently.

One hundred thousand dollars in cash in a satchel that Mr. Doheny lent Fall without taking his note or receipt and nothing whatever to do with the fact that a few weeks later Mr. Fall, as Secretary of the Interior, member of President Harding's Cabinet, leased 28,000 acres of oil lands in California to Mr. Doheny.

MR. DOHENY says he believes the company will make one hundred million dollars of profit out of that lease, which shows that he is a good business man. The next time the United States needs a Secretary of the Interior it might hire Mr. Doheny. He knows how to make good bargains; more than can be said for some of our Secretaries of the Interior.

THE General Electric Company at its plant in East Orange, N. J., shows an electric bulb of 150,000 candlepower. The bulb, 22 inches high, produces heat of 2,000 degrees—that it melts glass. It takes 30,000 watts to supply power in this big bulb. It would not be a bad idea, under certain circumstances and certain administrations, to install two or three hundred such bulbs in the Department of the Interior, and keep them going night and day.

ONE good thing will come of the Teapot Dome scandal, beyond question. Mr. Coolidge will see to it that the naval oil lands are restored to the Navy and to the people of the United States that own them. Failure to do this would, of course, destroy Mr. Coolidge politically in 1924. But Mr. Coolidge isn't the sort of man to let that particular transaction pass, regardless of politics.

ONE YOUNG LADY in Washington bought $400,000 worth of black pearls, alleged to have belonged to the Empress of Russia, brought here by a certain Prince Yousoupoff.

"Let the buyer beware." The Russian government claims the crown jewels as the property of the Russian people, of course, they ARE the property of the Russian people, having been taken out of them in taxes and blood, during the years of Czardom. Title to such loot may be thin and doubtful.

THE WAR cost this country eleven billions of dollars lent to the Allies, plus other billions virtually given away to profiteers, ship builders, flying machine builders, etc.—plus Heaven knows how many billions that the people paid in higher cost of living.

But the Federal Reserve Bank reports that "the whole thing has been absorbed." It's all fixed. Our money is all right. For us, financially and otherwise, the war is over.

This is a healthy country. Don't spoil it with any League of Nations or World Court folly.

ARSON CHARGE DENIED BY BROTHERS

Bollards Accused of Setting Fire to Their Factory on Night of January 4

Haverhill, Jan. 26.—Dore Bollard, No. 45 Hancock street, and Prudence Bollard, No. 3 Hillside street, were arrested by police inspectors on charges of setting fire to their top lift factory, at No. 94 Wingate street, on the night of January 4. They pleaded not guilty to arson charges before Judge John J. Winn in the Central District Court. At the request of the police, the case was continued until February 2, for trial. Both defendants are held in $3,000 bail, which was furnished.

The details of the Bollard fire could not be learned, police and fire officials keeping mum on the matter.

The Bollard brothers are very well-known in this city, Prudence having been engaged in the wood heel business here a few years ago in the firm of Bollard & Bailey.

Recently he has conducted a top lift business on Wingate street.

Bresnahan appeared in court several days ago representing a man who was charged with non-payment of a debt. Judge Stone dismissed the charge when Bresnahan agreed to have his client assign certain stocks which he owned to the plaintiff.

When the assignment papers were presented by Bresnahan to Judge Stone, he glanced at them, found they did not contain the name or signature of the assignee, and then the judicial anger started to rise.

"You have handed me an assignment without the name of the assignee," the court said angrily. "Now will you name him?"

Bresnahan refused to give the name of his client.

"I hereby direct that all papers in this case be impounded and I personally will present this matter to the Massachusetts Bar Association for such action as that body deems meet," announced the court.

Bresnahan refused to comment on the court's action and stalked from the court room. He has been a lawyer in Boston for more than ten years.

He was one of the leading figures in the case which lead up to the removal of Nathan Tufts as district attorney of Middlesex County.

Jewtraw won in a magnificent race against Gorman. The Canadian got away to a flying start and led until fifty yards from the finish, when he faltered and was caught by the first American. The fast pace set by the Canadian for almost the whole distance was a material factor in Jewtraw's victory.

Joe Moore of New York was the only other American to get among the first ten, finishing eighth. Harry Keskey of Chicago, American national champion, was twelfth and William Steinmetz of Chicago fourteenth, the latter being the only American to lose his heat.

BOSTON-BOUND SHIP IS TOWED INTO HALIFAX

Freighter Beemsterdijk Safe After Drifting Disabled in the Gale for 24 Hours

The office of the Holland-America line on State street today received dispatches from Halifax stating that the big freighter Beemsterdijk, with both propellers stripped bare of blades and her rudder and stern post torn away, had been safely towed into that port by the Furness line freighter Valemore. Both vessels are bound for Boston, the former from Rotterdam and the latter from Liverpool.

The Beemsterdijk's propellers and rudder were wrecked on submerged wreckage Thursday and she wallowed in a heavy sea for twenty-four hours before the Valemore steamed up in response to her radio appeal for help. After standing by until the sea subsided a little the Valemore succeeded in getting a towing line to the disabled ship and towed her into port.

From Halifax also comes a dispatch saying that the American tanker Suwanee, Brigham, England, for New York, had put in there with her commander, Captain Inskip, her chief engineer and one sailor seriously injured. The tanker was boarded by a sea on January 14 which swept her from stem to stern, smashing boats and deck fittings and crashing through a bulkhead, partially flooded the engine room.

Captain Inskip's left leg is terribly lacerated, his right ankle sprained and he is otherwise injured. The chief engineer suffered a fractured arm and was terribly cut about the head. The sailor's hip and thigh were crushed. All three are in the hospital at Halifax.

COUNTESS SAILS AS FAMILY ARE ABSENT

New York, Jan. 26 (I.N.S.).—If Countess Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten, the former Millicent Rogers, has won the approval of her millionaire father, Colonel Henry Huddleston Rogers, to her marriage with Count Salm, there was no indication of it today as the couple sailed aboard the Veendam, on a belated honeymoon to Europe.

None of Countess Ludwig Salm's relatives were at the dock to bid her good-bye.

"I am very happy," Countess Salm said.

"I am going to South Africa to discover a new monkey, while the Count plays tennis in the olympic games."

Count Otto Salm, brother of the bridegroom, accompanied the couple.

Living Statue

MISS LOIS TWIGGAR

Wellesley College girl as she appeared representing Roseillno's statue of the Virgin in the Tau Zeta Epsilon Society's presentation of living statues.

Fity the poor model at Wellesley.

For her the Tau Zeta Epsilon Society, in presenting its living statuary, has selected the work of the Middle Ages and some of the color schemes the artists of that day concocted.

The model, perforce, must appear stained and bedecked in the colors of the original.

And then the hair must be twisted, pulled and snarled into shape. All told, it takes several hours to get the model into something near the likeness of the figure she is supposed to represent.

One of the most striking figures was that of "The Virgin," painted terra-cotta statue done by Antonio Rosellino. He lived in the fifteenth century and he used a splash of blue, a dash of red and a smear of green to help.

Miss Lois Twiggar of Ossining, N. Y., was elected to show how Rosellino's Virgin looked.

30 LOSE LIVES IN COAL MINE EXPLOSION

Many Others Injured in Illinois Disaster; Heroic Rescues of Entombed Victims

Johnson City, Ill., Jan. 26.—Thirty men were killed, eight were seriously injured and two others are missing following an explosion in the East Side mine of the Crerer Coal Company.

The explosion is believed to have resulted from spontaneous combustion of coal dust.

It was hours before mine rescue workers could penetrate the dense fumes to reach the imprisoned miners, who were caught in Entries 11 and 12, situated about a mile from the shaft on the 280-foot level.

Of forty men working here, thirty bodies had been taken out this morning, five were resuscitated by physicians, and three were able to make their way to the top.

MANY HEROIC RESCUES.

There were approximately 450 men working in the colliery, and most of these were brought quickly to the surface.

One of the saddest incidents of the explosion was in the home of Mrs. Jesse Kaplinger, whose husband was killed in a mine disaster twelve years ago. His death left the widow with seven small children and she struggled valiantly to rear and educate them.

The explosion claimed the breadwinners, Wilson, nineteen, and Clyde, seventeen.

Under Illinois law, $2,500 must be paid for each death in the disaster and about $600 for burial.

The horror was the worst but one in the history of Williamson County and southern Illinois, being exceeded only by the deadly battle of July, 1922, between strikers and their sympathizers and non-union employes of the mines at Herrin, eight miles west.

The cause of the explosion has not been. Manager Herbert McCullough and Mine Boss Jesse Ford are named among the dead.

News of the disaster spread throughout Williamson County like wildfire and Herrin of the unhappy memory led every other community in rushing relief organizations, physicians and ambulances.

First effort of many relief teams was to clear the shaft of gas. Communication with the entombed miners was established by telephone, and the growing crowd at the mouth of the mine was encouraged for a time by the report from below that all was well. Within a few minutes, telephone communication was broken off.

The relief teams worked in shifts, and Johnson City and Herrin physicians were among the volunteers who forced pouring gases in their efforts to be of help.

Wives and children of the entombed men, their faces purpled by the zero weather, remained for hours at the head of the shaft, at first encouraged by that "All's well" report, but gradually losing heart as the hours wore away and the injured began to be brought out. From time to time the silence was broken by the agonized cries of wives and mothers.

DUELL IS PLANNING TO MARRY LILLIAN GISH IN LOVE TRIANGLE

CLUBMAN DIVORCED IN PARIS

1st Wife, Also Actress, Charges Desertion; Other Americans Win Freedom Abroad

New York, Jan. 25.—Has another silver screen idol proved the pivot in a triangle?

Will marriage follow?

Society is all het up today over the divorce secured in Paris by beautiful Mme. Charles H. Duell from her dashing hubby. It is rumored that the millionaire clubman is in love with and plans to wed Lillian Gish, motion picture star.

The latter scaled the heights of dramatic motion picture art in her portrayal of the leading role in the "White Sister," now showing in Boston.

Duell comes from one of New York's oldest families. His first wife was Lillian Tucker, an actress. They were married in October, 1921.

At that time Mr. Duell, who is the son of the late Judge Charles H. Duell of the United States Court of Appeals, was treasurer of the New York State Republican Committee and chairman of the finance committee.

MAY BE COUNT'S BRIDE.

He is a cousin of Elihu Root and was a close friend of former President Roosevelt, having managed his campaign tour in 1912 when he was a candidate for President on the Progressive ticket.

Mrs. Tucker secured her divorce in the famous Seine Tribunal, Paris. She charged desertion and offered as evidence a letter from her husband stating that he would never resume conjual relations with her.

Society is much excited over the rumor that Mrs. Atherton of New York, who is a member of the prominent Lawrence family of Boston, is seeking a divorce in Paris on grounds of desertion.

According to gossip, Mrs. Atherton may become the wife of Count Pierre de Jumilhac, one of the wealthiest and liveliest of the younger French noblemen.

Count Jumilhac came into prominence a few months ago when, with a friend, he waylaid and whipped the pamphletist, George Anquetil, for having published in the Parisian scandal sheet, Guignol, the statement that Jumilhac was one of the several noblemen responsible for a prominent diplomat having lost a fortune at the Jockey Club.

SECURES DIVORCE.

Mrs. Atherton is one of the most beautiful members of the so-called "Ritz Society" here.

Another Paris divorce granted was that of Mrs. H. Van Buren, formerly Miss Mathilda Saporta, a wealthy New York woman, who is shortly expected to marry Manuel Piva, wealthy scion of a noble Roman family.

Mrs. Benjamin Wood of New York is in Paris to seek a divorce. She expected to have her decree by April, making the usual plea of desertion.

Another sensational Paris divorce is predicted with the arrival there of Mrs. Margaret Morgan Belmont without her husband. The former Margaret Andrews, in reply to a question about her plans, only laughed and said:

"My husband will be here in a few weeks."

While he was levelling his revolver Policeman George Kramer fired, the bullet crushing through the bandit's face, killing him instantly. His companion, Bill Carson, surrendered.

TANKER BATTERED; TWO OFFICERS HURT

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 26 (I.N.S.).—The Anglo-American oil tanker Suwannee, from Channel Port, Eng., for New York, was undergoing repairs here today following a battle with terrific gales.

Several of the crew were injured. Captain Taylor suffered a broken leg and severe bruises, and Chief Engineer Clark a dislocated shoulder and broken an arm.

FINDS CAT FROZEN TO STONE WALL

Middletown, N. Y., Jan. 26.—The "moews" of a cat coming from a stone wall in the early morning attracted Anthony Temple of Near Roscoe as he went to his barn. Attempting to pick the cat up he discovered that its feet were frozen to the wall. Temple thawed it loose and received a purr of appreciation.

BURIED VICTIMS' HEADS IN BLOCK OF CONCRETE

Illinois Man Confesses Murdering His Wife and Her Brother Over a Year Ago

Aurora, Ill., Jan. 26.—Warren Lincoln today confessed that he had shot and killed his wife and her brother, Byron Shoup, January 19, 1923, and had buried the bodies, after dismembering them.

The heads of the two, he said, could be found in the city dump in a concrete block he had molded around them. He was taken to the dump and diggers, under his direction found the block. It weighed several hundred pounds.

As the block was uncovered, Lincoln swooned in the arms of Chief of Detectives Wiers.

Imbedded in the block were found the heads of Mrs. Lincoln and her brother.

BALLOT 583 TO 2 AGAINST BONUS

Hartford, Ct., Jan. 26.—The Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, in accordance with a recent referendum vote of the membership, showing 583 for tax reduction and two for a soldiers' bonus, has forwarded to all Connecticut representatives in Congress a statement requesting them, "in the interest of good government, sound finances and national prosperity, to vote for a reduction of taxes and in opposition to a soldiers' bonus."

MUSSOLINI TO BUY TOMB OF VIRGIL

Naples, Italy, Jan. 26.—Premier Mussolini has ordered the purchase of the tomb of Virgil, which is now private property. The surrounding plot will be transformed into a garden of Greco-Roman style with roses, laurel and myrtle, thus becoming a sort of shrine for lovers of the classical poet the world over.

Gas Bonds Issue

The State Department of Public Utilities today issued a decision approving the issuance of $287,000 bonds by the Old Colony Gas Company, which supplies gas to consumers in Hingham, Scituate, Cohasset and neighboring communities. The issue is to pay for extensions and additions to its plant.

REED BANKS ON ANTI-WILSON SUPPORTERS

Missourian Sees a Chance to Win Nomination if Coalition Is Successful

Washington, Jan. 26.—Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, whose bitter enmity and opposition to Woodrow Wilson has provided one of the most spectacular political feuds in recent years, will formally declare himself a candidate for the Democratic nomination, at New York, within a few days, according to his friends in Washington.

Reed is holding a series of conferences in Missouri today to weigh the chances for his securing the thirty-six delegates from his home State as a nucleus for his campaign. Prior to leaving the capital, he told friends he would have an important announcement to make before February 1.

The Missourian's determination to get into the fight is understood to be based on two main considerations:

1—The belief, held not only by Reed, but by many other Democrats, that "anything may happen" in New York next June, particularly if the reputed coalition of anti-McAdoo strength is successful in blocking the nomination of the ex-Treasury head, and

2—A determination on the part of the anti-Wilson faction in the party to wage a bitter fight against the convention's endorsing the international policies of Mr. Wilson, particularly the League of Nations.

There is also a personal angle to the matter where Reed, himself, is concerned. He has never forgotten that he was denied a seat in the convention four years ago, because friends of the ex-President were in control of the committee on contests.

AMERICAN SHOT IN MEXICO

Victim of Bandit Outfit Near Tampico; Rebels Prepare to Attack Port From Sea

New Orleans, La., Jan. 26.—The departure of the Mexican gunboat Bravo from Southern waters to attack the rebel ports of Progreso and Vera Cruz is imminent, the consul-general here announced today. A trial trip will be made on the Mississippi River today to test out her new engines. Marines to complete the complement of the vessel are due tonight, via El Paso, Tex.

Tampico, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Two batteries of artillery are expected to arrive here today to defend the port against possible attack by rebel ships.

This precautionary measure was decided upon following the reappearance of the Insurgent gunboat Zaragoza off Tampico yesterday. The craft anchored about one mile from the mouth of the Panuco River and her commander is said to have advised the military authorities here to be prepared for eventualities.

Nine bandits attacked and wounded the paymaster of the Transcontinental Oil Company, an American concern, near here. They robbed him of $3,000 pesos. The men drove up in an automobile shouting "Vive de la Huerta," and after relieving the paymaster of his money disappeared. Troops were unable to find them.

Charges Obregon "Sold" Mexico to the U. S.

Brownsville, Tex., Jan. 26.—President Obregon has "sold" Mexico to American industrial interests in exchange for arms and ammunition, asserts a proclamation issued by General Francisco Coss, former Obregon leader, who revolted Tuesday at Saltillo.

Coss declared he would have remained loyal to the government had it pursued its efforts to subdue the revolutionists without calling upon the United States for aid and "selling the potential wealth of Mexico for arms and ammunition."

TOWNS COMBINE TO FIGHT RAISE IN R. R. FARES

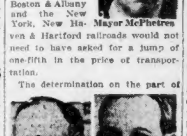
Executives to Employ Experts and a Long and Bitter Battle Is Expected

Seven cities and four towns in Greater Boston have joined in a concerted fight against the 20 per cent. fare increase granted recently to the railroads by the Public Utilities Department of Massachusetts. The leader of the movement, on behalf of thousands of commuters, is Mayor Richard B. Coolidge of Medford.

The united communities, all but one of them situated in Middlesex County, will engage experts and retain attorneys of experience in railroad rate matters, in order to show, if possible, that with the proper sort of management the Boston & Maine, the Boston & Albany and the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroads would not need to have asked for a jump of one-fifth in the price of transportation.

Mayor McPhetres

The determination on the part of



Mayor Kimball Mayor Webster

some of the communities affected to prepare for a long, thorough and probably expensive battle was arrived at following a dinner at the City Club, the Mayor of Medford presiding.

Among the cities and towns represented were:

Waltham, Mayor Beale; Malden, Mayor Leonard; Somerville, Mayor Webster; Melrose, Mayor Provanzino; Medford, Mayor Coolidge. City Solicitor Brooks and Alderman Coughlan; Arlington, Selectman Crosby; Winchester, Chairman Byrne of the Board of Selectmen; Wakefield, former Senator Charles A. Dean. The town of Bedford was represented by one of its officials and Mayor McPhetres of Lynn and Chisholm of Everett are said to have sent word of their interest and pledges of their co-operation.

The next step in the fight against the new rates is scheduled for Monday, when the Public Utilities Board will take up the petition of Alderman Charles A. Coughlin of Medford.

Alderman Coughlin's petition is somewhat novel in that it makes no direct reference to the 20 per cent. increase and does not directly ask that the recent permit of the Utilities Board be rescinded. Instead the Medford alderman files an objection to "existing" passenger tariffs, and asks that they be revised in the interest of the traveling public.

FLEEING THIEF IS HALTED BY PISTOL SHOT

Police Catch Three Men Robbing Tremont Street Drug Store

Three burglars, surprised by police while looting the Hub Pharmacy at No. 275 Tremont street, were captured after a struggle during which the police fired one shot.

The attention of Sergeant Thomas Harvey and Special Officer John Wallins of the Lagrange street police station was drawn to the trio as they entered the alley off Hollis street. The officers saw the three men approach the rear door of the Hub Pharmacy and force an entrance. One of the trio went inside while two remained on guard.

The officers approached the unsuspecting burglars and seized them. As the four men struggled, the burglar within the store made a dash for the front door.

Sergeant Harvey disengaged one of his arms, drew his revolver and fired. The shot missed its mark, but it had the desired effect of halting the fleeing burglar. He turned in his tracks and, his hands raised high above his head, returned to the officers and submitted to arrest.

The men arrested gave their names as Albert Garnelli, twenty-nine years old, of No. 4 Oak place; John C. Elmore, twenty-eight years old, no home; and Thomas F. Fitzgerald, thirty years old, of No. 29 Granger street.

Garnelli, Fitzgerald and Elmore were before Judge Sullivan in Municipal Court charged with breaking and entering and larceny. Garnelli and Fitzgerald were each held in $10,000 and Elmore in $5,000 bonds.

TELLS WHY LAWYERS SAILED ON CUNARDER

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 26.—Frederick E. Wadhams of this city, treasurer since 1902 of the American Bar Association, today explained why a Cunard liner was selected instead of an American vessel to transport members of the association to England in July, 1923. He bitterly attacked what he termed "insinuation that a Cunard liner was selected by the committee for the reason that liquor is served on their ships."

"A sincere effort was made by us to secure an American vessel for the voyage," he said. "However for some reason known best to themselves, the United States Line representatives would not and did not place at our disposal a vessel having adequate accommodations which would sail on the day on which we were obliged to sail in accordance with the invitation presented to us by our hosts across the sea."

VICTIM OF FIRE ENDS HIS LIFE

Stern, Largest Loser in Lyndonville, Vt., Blaze, Cuts His Throat After Being Quizzed

Lyndonville, Vt., Jan. 26.—Albert Stern, owner of the Stern block, the largest building destroyed in the $500,000 conflagration here last Monday, when seven people lost their lives, committed suicide today by slashing his throat, after being questioned by the State fire marshal.

The motive that impelled Stern to end his own life is a mystery.

It is known that Stern was the heaviest loser in the fire which wiped out the business section of the town.

It also is known that just before the fire was discovered or a short time later, there was a terrific explosion in the Stern block. This explosion was responsible for the death of two women, three children and one man who lived in apartments above the boiler room of the block.

Investigation into the origin of the fire was taken up by the State fire marshal almost before the ruins were cold. The story of the explosion in the Stern building was investigated and its truth apparently was established.

With the investigation nearing a close, the marshal today called Stern and questioned him as to what he knew about the fire, the amount of insurance he carried on his building and other matters relating to his business.

Stern was nervous and ill at ease while answering the marshal. At times he appeared to be incoherent, but officials thought it due to nervousness caused by the strain under which he has been laboring since the fire took its heavy toll in the little town.

Half an hour after he was excused by the marshal Stern was found in his room, his throat cut from ear to ear. He was dying when discovered.

The fire marshal refused to make any statement concerning the suicide or the testimony Stern had given earlier in the day.

Friends of Stern declare that he suffered heavily by the fire, the insurance only covering only a small part of his loss.

PRESIDENT ORDERS PROBE OF THE TEAPOT DOME OIL SCANDAL

WILL SEND GUILTY TO PRISON

came forth today with a demand that the leases be cancelled immediately.

At the direction of the President, Secretary of the Interior Work today started an investigation of the legal and technical aspects of the Teapot Dome and California oil leases.

It also was learned that an official statement of the President's views concerning the leases probably would be issued by the White House following the testimony of Fall.

"There is only one thing that ought to be done without demur or delay, and that is to cancel the leases," said Johnson.

"This is no time for technical discussions. The Democrats for a long time have required, and recent developments imperatively demand, that those who ignorantly or wilfully in good faith or bad, have entered into or approved or countenanced tainted contracts disposing of the public domain, should instantly repudiate them.

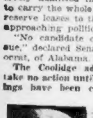
NO EXCUSE FOR DELAY.

"This is the very least that any administration should do. It should have been done long ago; but it must be done, and done at once. There can be little excuse for what happened; there can be no excuse for failure to act immediately."

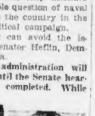
Virtually all Democrats to the Senate agreed with Johnson. They freely admitted that they intended to carry the whole question of naval reserve leases to the country in the approaching political campaign.

"No candidate can avoid the issue," declared Senator Heflin, Democrat, of Alabama.

The Coolidge administration will take no action until the Senate hearings have been completed. While



Sen. Thomas Walsh



Sen. Hiram Johnson

President Coolidge now inclines to the belief that Teapot Dome is headed directly toward criminal action, it was, nevertheless, pointed out at the White House today that such action can only come when the administration is sure of its ground.

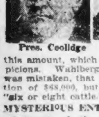
FALL TESTIFIES MONDAY.

Fall himself, broken and ill, will tell his story Monday before action is begun either towards criminal prosecution or toward cancellation of the leases he negotiated to the Sinclair and Doheny interests. He borrowed sums totaling $135,000 from both, according to the evidence.

Meanwhile, the Public Lands Committee itself went back to work today to try to straighten out the maze of conflicting testimony and charges before it.

Archie Roosevelt and G. D. Wahlberg, both of whom resigned from Sinclair's company because of "suspicion," were summoned by Senator Smoot, Republican, of Utah, to explain differences concerning a payment of $68,000 to Tom Johnson, foreman of Fall's New Mexico ranch.

Roosevelt testified Wahlberg had told him about cancelled checks for



Pres. Coolidge

this amount, which aroused his suspicions. Wahlberg and Roosevelt was mistaken, that he made out a check of $68,000, but had referred to "six or eight cattle."

MYSTERIOUS ENTRY

Interest of the committee also centered around an unsigned memorandum found in the committee's files. Clerks declared they do not know how it got there. The memorandum denied Fall ever obtained money from Sinclair or Doheny, and assailed the investigation into Fall's private affairs "as an attack upon decency."

Senator Walsh, Democrat of Montana, said today C. C. Chase, Fall's son-in-law, or Senator Smoot, may be called to the stand to tell if they know anything about the memorandum.

Testimony of Fred C. Dezendorf, former employe of the land office, that the government failed to act upon his adverse report on the acquisition by Standard Oil Company of California of sections 14 and 26 in Elks Hills started the committee into a thorough investigation of the California leases.

Leslie C. Garnett, former special assistant attorney general, charged Attorney-General Daugherty failed to act upon his recommendation that proceedings be launched to recover the land, said to be mineral bearing and thus not open to entry.

Garnett said he was told by Daugherty in a note delivered to him by a counsel for the Standard company, not to take any action until you hear from Mr. ——."

The testimony, Washington believes, suggests at least one and possibly two cabinet resignations and, beyond a doubt, early cancellations of the Sinclair Teapot Dome (Wyo.) and the Doheny Elk Hills (Cal.) leases.

The White House regards as most damaging of all the testimony by "Colonel" J. W. Zevely, agent and personal counsel of Sinclair, owner of the Teapot Dome lease, that he loaned Fall $25,000 of Sinclair's money.

LOAN UNJUSTIFIED.

President Coolidge's view , it is stated, is that assuming there was a possible justification for Doheny's loan of $100,000 to Fall on the ground of friendship, there was certainly no such reason for Zevely, Sinclair's man, to lend the ex-Secretary any large amount.

Secretary of the Navy Denby, who was a party to the leasing of the naval oil fields, admitted at the Cabinet meeting that he "is now convinced the wool was pulled over my eyes" in the granting of the leases at Fall's suggestion. The Secretary urged Federal action in the matter to go to the bottom of the entire mess.

It was the flat contradiction by Zevely of Fall's denial that he ever received any money from Sinclair that brought this Senate committee investigation to a climax.

Fall had declared he received no money from Sinclair after the Teapot Dome lease was executed, either by gift or loan or otherwise.

Zevely testified that he loaned $25,000 to Fall in June, 1923, after Fall resigned as Secretary of the Interior.

The loan was in Liberty bonds, which belonged to Sinclair and were given by him to Zevely to be turned over to Fall.

The loan was made when Fall agreed to go to Russia to investigate oil prospects for Sinclair.

Zevely declared positively the $25,000 was not a fee to Fall for his services, but purely a loan, which Fall acknowledged by giving a note for the amount after he returned from Russia. This note, Zevely said is held by him in trust for Sinclair to whom the bonds belonged.

TOTAL NOW $135,000.

Zevely said further that Fall demanded an additional advance of $10,000 for expenses on the Russian trip, which was paid. Thus $35,000 Zevely he intended to use the $25,000 in buying ranch properties in New Mexico.

The $25,000 loan and the allowance of $10,000 for expenses to Russia bring the acknowledged gifts or loans to Fall on account of his transactions in the oil leases up to $135,000.

DENBY'S PART IN DEAL.

The features of the evidence to date in the investigation that involve Secretary Denby in the oil scandal are these:

It is established that he signed over the half billion dollars' worth of Navy oil, on which the operation of the American navy depends, with Former Secretary Fall to the Doheny and Sinclair interests, after receiving the strongest written protests of seven of the most trusted officers of the navy against his action.

These officers, fighting to preserve for the nation, the oil which they held in trust, several of them being caretakers, were so obturate that Secretary Denby finally had all seven of them transferred to other duty.

Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, was formerly a director in the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation, in which he and his wife had $50,000 worth of stock, held in his wife's name, and Roosevelt resigned his directorship and sold the oil stock—to whom was not brought out.

Zevely declared positively the $25,000 was not a fee to Fall for his services, but purely a loan, which Fall acknowledged by giving a note for the amount after he returned from Russia. This note, Zevely said is held by him in trust for Sinclair to whom the bonds belonged.

SEARCH IN VAIN FOR ANDERSON'S FRIEND, 'KING'

Detectives in Anti-Saloon Case Also Fail to Find the Mysterious Mr. Mann

New York, Jan. 26 (I.N.S.).—Detectives from the office of District Attorney Banton today searched through directory and hotel records of New York and Baltimore in an effort to locate the mysterious stranger, "John T. King," the generous friend who gave William H. Anderson, nationally known dry leader, on trial on charges of forgery, $25,000 as a gift.

A search was also being made for the equally mysterious "Henry Mann," publicity agent to whom Anderson said he gave the $25,000 to further the cause of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, of which the accused man is superintendent.

Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins excused the jury for today. The case will be reopened Monday. It was expected the fate of Anderson would be in the jury's hands not later than Tuesday afternoon.

Anderson, accused of ordering alterations on the books of the dry organization. These alterations, the State charges, made it possible for the dry leader to defraud the league, the State and the government, in that amounts paid as salary were charged to road expenses, on which income tax did not have to be paid.

Anderson, in his own defense, told of receiving $25,000 from King—a man he did not know, who called him a "darn fool," admitting that he ("King") "liked dern fools."

If convicted Anderson faces a sentence of from two and one-half to five years in Sing Sing prison.

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 26 (I.N.S.).—John T. King, former Republican National Committeeman from Connecticut, today denied he was the "John T. King" who gave $25,000 to William H. Anderson of the New York Anti-Saloon League. King said he did not know Anderson "or anyone connected with any prohibition movement." He also denied knowing "Henry Mann," publicity man to whom Anderson said he paid the $25,000 "King" gave him.

SOFT COAL PACT TO BE RENEWED FOR TWO YEARS

Agreement Is Expected to Be Reached Without Danger of Strike Looming

Washington, Jan. 25 (I.N.S.).—A new wage agreement in the bituminous coal fields to replace the one expiring April 1, will be negotiated without recourse to a strike, according to information reaching Washington today.

Scale committees, representing operators and miners, will meet in Jacksonville February 1 to formulate a new agreement. They are expected to reach a settlement on a two-year basis after both sides have bickered for position.

The miners are planning to ask a four-year agreement under the present wage scale, while the operators will ask that the contract endure for only one year. A compromise plan of two years probably will then be adopted.

DEPOSED MINE LEADERS GIVEN REHEARING

Admit They Violated Agreement With Nova Scotia Coal Companies

Indianapolis, Jan. 26 (I.N.S.).—The United Mine Workers of America in convention here reconsidered today the case of the deposed leaders in Nova Scotia, who were charged with having attempted to turn the district over to the Red "internationale of Moscow." Members of the Nova Scotia local unions declared they had not been given a square deal.

They admitted Secretary McLauchlan, now in a Canadian prison, violated the working contract with the coal companies and the constitution of the mine workers in calling a strike, but contended that "he placed women and children before a contract or constitutional law."

Red adherents charged that Canadian mounted police rode down women and children in dispersing strikers.

On the other hand, President Lewis declared that affairs of the district have been disrupted by Communists of Canada seeking to take over affairs of that district. Conservative administration supporters have held the "whip hand" from the start of the convention.

MAYBE YOU'LL FEEL MORE INCLINED TO SAY "YES"

WHEN HE ASKS TO HOLD your hand; you won't mind at all if your nails are nicely manicured.

THERE IS JUST ONE "don't" and that is—don't cut your cuticle. Cutting the cuticle injures the nail and root and causes hang nails.

THE BEST GROOMED WOMAN I know says she softens her cuticle with warm soapsuds, and then pushes it back gently all around with a small piece of cotton. A soft towel would do as well.

ANOTHER WOMAN TOLD ME she used a jelly; it sells for 35 cents and contains no acid or harmful substance. Then there is a salve, made by a reliable firm. It comes in a little round jar. Warm olive oil is very good, too.

THE MOST CONVENIENT form of nail polish is a powder in a little round container. 35 Cents. French. The cap turns to perforation and you pour out a very little on the palm of your hand. Economical. Easy to use.

NOT NEARLY SO DISAGREEABLE as its name is a nail polish in powdered form. 35 Cents. Very good. A French paste for high polish sells for 50 cents. It is red. In a wooden box.

MANY WOMEN NEVER cut their nails. They say it's better to use a file or emery board. Scissors often break the nails.

TO KEEP YOUR HANDS SOFT AND WHITE use a creamy liquid. 75 cents. Good-sized bottle, that has a shaker top. So you get just the right amount. You don't pour it. Dries instantly. Good for skins that can't stand glycerine.

ENTIRELY FREE FROM THE unpleasant odor that usually accompanies a depilatory is a powder. $1.00. Quick. Safe.

SOME WOMEN PREFER to take electrical treatments. For superfluous hair. Especially if it's on the face. The only safe way is to go to a reliable specialist. $5.00 an hour. Can remove as many as 50 hairs in an hour.

Answer to K. L. The razor you mention is as good as any. I know many women who shave under the arms every two weeks.

Answer to A. B. H. Since your doctor said the puffiness under your eyes was not caused by intestinal trouble, why not use an eye-strap? $3.00.

Answer to L. F. J. Give me your full address and I'll write you confidentially about that chemistry book. Firm names cannot be given in print.

MALONE TO GET GO WITH WINNER OF WILSON-REED BATTLE

PAL TO TRY FOR KAYO TUESDAY

By JACK CONWAY.

Jock Malone, brilliant St. Paul middleweight, will meet the winner of the ten-round ring classic between Johnny Wilson, former world's middleweight champion, and Pal Reed of Natick, which will be staged by the Armory A. A. at Mechanics Building Tuesday night.

Jock Malone

Malone wired from Buffalo asking for the opportunity to test his remarkable skill and clean-hitting power against the victor of the Triple A's Elks' Night show.

Wilson and Reed each readily agreed to tackle Malone. Each of these young men believes that aggressiveness and hitting power can upset the Lewis-Walsh entry.

Wilson is at Summit, N. J., where he is training for his battle with Reed. Johnny is in excellent condition as he has not broken training since last June when he began work for his contest with Greb at the Polo Grounds.

Although Wilson won over Reed in a sensational tussle when these men last met, there are many close followers of the fistic game who believe that the Natick person will forge to victory on Tuesday night.

Reed had Wilson groggy from left hand wallops in the second round of his last mill with the former middleweight champion. Wilson then kept at long range and, piled up a lead. Pal came with a rush in the last two chapters and all but won the decision. Many of those who saw the bout were of the opinion Reed had won.

* * *

There will also be three eights. Jack Sharkey of this city will meet Billy Muldoon of Lynn, Joe Munroe of Charlestown will clash with Eddie Sardello of the North End, while Babe Adams of Lawrence will clash with Johnny Moore of the North End.

* * *

Harry Kelly is managing Tom Cotter, Quincy heavyweight. Jock Malone worked with Cotter while preparing for his Boston bout with Roland Todd. Malone says Cotter is one of the most promising youths he has encountered in his trips around the country. As Kelly is an expert handler of boxers, Cotter's rise in the dear old fistic racket should be rapid.

Bart O'Neil is one of the most promising of the new crop of amateur boxers. He proved his ability when he won over Tom Kirby of Roxbury at the inter-city show.

Tommy Leahy, Worcester lightweight, is eager to show in Boston rings. Leahy has defeated Sailor Byron, New England lightweight champion, several times and would now like to get a shot at the champion in a contest at 135 pounds with the title at stake.

* * *

Phil Bernstein, manager of Frankie Genaro, American flyweight champion, was greatly impressed by the way Jimmy Walsh, old-time ring star, handled the Genaro-Sheppard bout. "Walsh is the best referee I have ever seen perform," Bernstein told this writer.

Joe Jacobs, manager of Mike McTigue, world's light-heavyweight champion, was recently in Boston with Ad Stone, Philadelphia boxer. This writer met Jacobs in New York the day after the contest. "It is a pleasure to go to Boston with a boxer," said Jacobs. "The Massachusetts officials are fair, while the Bay State has the best system of any State in keeping count of the tickets. A manager of a boxer does not have to worry about not getting everything that is coming to him in a financial way, as the State inspectors check each entrance and guard the tickets in the boxes until after the house has been counted.

"In my experience as a manager I have lost thousands of dollars as a result of the crookedness of club officials, who have destroyed tickets before they could be counted."

Sam Golden, manager of George Ward, writes he is prepared to match the Elizabeth, N. J., welterweight for seven bouts with Pete Latzo of Scranton, Pa. When these men met recently Latzo won the decision. His victory was quite a surprise as Ward had been installed a 10 to 4 betting choice.

* * *

President Billy Cuddy of the St. Joseph's T. A. Society has done more than any one individual to develop amateur boxers. He announces another large entry list for his organization's show at Commercial Hall on Next Monday night.

* * *

When Wolf Larsen is discharged from a local hospital where he is under treatment he will once more demand recognition from Hambone Kelly.

* * *

Hambone's injured shoulder is once more in perfect condition and he is prepared to knock over anybody who challenges his position.

* * *

George Robinson is still on the injured list with a bad elbow. It was thought that the injured member was O. K. a few weeks ago. Robinson then joined Johnny Wilson's training camp at Summit, N. J. and had the old injury opened again.

* * *

Howard McRae, Cambridge lightweight, has once more heard the call of the ring. McRae has been training for several weeks and is ready to start against any of our brave 135-pounders. Although considered a ring veteran, McRae is only twenty-six years old.

ST. JOE'S HOLD CLASSES FOR NOVICES

Five novice classes are on the program. There will be bouts in the 112, 118, 126, 135 and 147-pound classes.

This is the third novice show the St. Joseph's T. A. S. have staged this season. In the two other tournaments, the fans were very much pleased. There was 42 bouts in the first novice tournament and 34 in the second show.

My Favorite Punch

By PANCHO VILLA.

My favorite punch is one that will knock out the other fellow. My Second choice is the punch which will stagger him so I can put him away a few minutes later.

Pancho Villa

I cannot say exactly which hand I like to use best, or which one has been used by me to score most of my victories. When I get into the ring and the bell rings, I don't remember very much about anything else except that I want to whip the other fellow in the fastest time that is possible.

So I jump out at him, and as soon as I see an opening, I make a swing with whichever hand is nearest to him. The next time I swing I do it exactly the same way; that is, I strike with the hand which can reach the opening quickest.

If it is a long fight, and I have the choice between hitting a man in the body or on the chin, I usually shoot at his body. The reason is that the job of hitting the chin is rather hard, no matter how great the opening may be, because the chin is a very small target, and it is always shifting. One must be very quick to hit a man on the right spot.

But when you see an opening to hit the body, it is a very big target, and you do not have to be an expert marksman to hit. When you do, the punch usually causes a bit of damage to the other fellow, because nobody likes to take a pounding in the body.

Victory in ring battles is very often decided by which man has the better left hand. That being so, I have tried desperately, especially since I have come to America, to develop my left hand, and from what people tell me, it is about as good as my right at this time.

So I have no favorite punch, except the one which knocks the other fellow down and out.

SENIORS WINNERS IN INTERCLASS GAMES

English High seniors won the interclass track and field championship meet, completed in the East Armory with the sprints and track events, and scored a grand total of 63½ points.

Class of '25 was second, with a total of 58 points; '26 was third, with 54½ points; '27 was fourth, with 32 points.

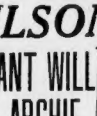
The best race in the senior division was the 100-yard dash, in which T. Crossen, '26, beat Sallagub. Scott won the dash handily; Bonitto captured the 300-yard run and Coulton the "600."

Lynn English Wins

Lynn English High track squad defeated Everett High, 35 to 15. Anderson and Rogers were the only first place winners on the visiting team.

MARCHANT WILL MEET ARCHIE WALKER

Matchmaker Bob McKirdy of the Commercial A. C. has arranged a double wind-up for his next show at Mechanics Building on Feb. 5. Besides the Frank Moody and Louis Bogash bout, which will be the feature McKirdy has clinched another 10 round contest between Ted Marchant, the lightweight champion of Wales, and Archie Walker, the sensational Hebrew lightweight from New York.



Ted Marchant

Walker is being groomed for the lightweight title. The New York Hebrew is no stranger in these parts. He appeared in several bouts in Worcester where he defeated Sailor Byron, the New England lightweight champion; Solly Green and Georgie (Kid) Lee, and a short while ago Walker knocked out that Cleveland sensation, Charlie O'Connell.

Jack Bernstein, who defeated Johnny Dundee a few months ago, was beaten by Archie Walker, while Mel Coogan, Johnny Williams and other stars in the lightweight class fell victims to the clever boxing ability of the Gotham youngster, who is a former Wall street broker.

Boston and New England boxing fans are steamed up over the feature contest between Moody and Bogash. The two Welsh middleweight champion defeated Pal Reed of Natick at New Bedford last Monday night in a ten-round bout. Previous to his victory over Reed, Moody has scored seven other wins, in which six of them were by the K. O. route. This is the hardest battle the Welsh man has been asked to face, but he is confident he will continue his winning streak at the expense of that sensational Bridgeport middleweight, who always produced the thrills in this city.

MONDT A FIEND FOR ACTION ON THE MAT

"Toots" Mondt, noted for his relentless and tireless wrestling action, will find a man of his own style in the person of Paul Zanovich, when they clash in the feature match of George V. Tuohey's world's championship elimination series in Mechanics Building next Wednesday night.

Mondt has the reputation of never letting up, a reputation which he followed in the fullest sense when he scored such a decisive and clean cut fall on Strangler Lewis here.

But in spite of his rough fire work he confines his work to downright wrestling and only indulges in rough stuff when forced to do so by his opponent as a matter of defence.

Zanovich, according to the reports of his match with Stanley Stuyzka, is as tireless as Mont, just as powerful and aggressive. He has his own pet holds, but of these he says little. That they are effective, however, is shown by his record.

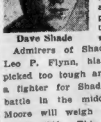
Where two such men clash there is bound to be some fast and rugged work.

Tuohey's new headquarters, No. 640 Province Building, is a busy place with the fans coming in to congratulate the veteran on getting his health back.

Dick Davis court is expected to reach Boston today, while Sampson is due tomorrow.

DAVE SHADE TO CLASH WITH TED MOORE

Another international middleweight contest will be staged by the Faneuil A. A. next Friday night in Mechanics Building when Dave Shade makes his debut in the middleweight class in a ten-round battle with Ted Moore, of England, who recently spotted Tommy Loughran ten pounds and gave him a particularly tough time to win.



Dave Shade

Admirers of Shade believe that Leo P. Flynn, his manager, has picked too tough and too powerful a fighter for Shade for his first battle in the middleweight class. Moore will weigh 160 pounds, or forfeit $500. This will give him about seven pounds on the clever Shade.

Moore has proved to Boston fans he is a hard, fast, clever and game fighter and in the event of a match here between him and Roland Todd, he would rule a favorite over the champion. Those who think it is too tough a match for Shade, believe that Moore with the extra pounds will wear down the speedy and clever Shade.

To this, Leo Flynn replies: "That there isn't any money for Shade fighting welterweights as he has licked everyone of them, and he is now forced to fight middleweights. We know exactly what we are shooting at and Boston fans needn't express any sympathy for Shade until he is in need of it. We know that the Englishman is tough, but so is Shade. If Moore is as tough as his press agents make him out to be, then the fans will witness a fight that will make them stand on their heads."

PITTSBURGH HOCKEY TEAM BOOKED TWICE

Previous visits of the Pittsburgh team to this city have been regarded as important events on the local hockey calendar. The Pittsburgh team this year, known as the Yellow Jackets, come here with a remarkable hockey machine.

A brand new lineup, a truly representative all-star Ontaria team will represent Pittsburgh against New Haven Monday night and the Boston Hockey Club on Tuesday night.

The dashing Lionel Conacher, Canada's greatest athlete; Roy Worters, Duke McCurry, Paddy Sullivan, Tex Potts, Howard Cotton, Alex McKinnon and Dinny Manners will wear yellow jackets.

MASSACHUSETTS FIVE WINS FROM HARVARD

Harvard was handed a basketball surprise last night at the Hemenway Gym when the Massachusetts Aggies triumphed over the Crimson, 26 to 22. Fouls defeated Harvard and late in the game Captain Gordon was rushed into the lineup in an effort to prevent defeat but he was unable to turn the tide.

ANDY MARTIN TO CLASH WITH PARKER

Andy Martin of the South End will replace Willie Shugrue of Waterbury against Terry Parker in the feature bout at the Casino A. C. Lynn on Monday night.

Terry Parker

Shugrue, while training, fell in the gym and dislocated his shoulder and he notified the club he would be unable to go through with the match.

It will be at least a month before he will be able to start boxing again. Martin was under contract to the Lynn club to meet the winner of the Parker-Shugrue bout at Lynn in two weeks and when the club received notice of Shugrue's injury Martin was elected to fill the breach.

Al Corbett of Boston will get the chance to even matters with Young Ross of Lynn when they clash in the semi-final. Ross substituted against Corbett at Lynn about a month and the fans didn't figure he had a chance to win from the Boston boy, but he surprised the talent by knocking out Corbett in the fifth round after one of the best fights of the season.

In the six-round preliminaries Bert Arnold of Woburn will meet Jimmy Barrett, a protege of Manager George Korbis, the Fighting Greek of Peabody, who is as tough as they make them, will meet Eddie Stodard of Plymouth.

The Cathedral basketball team will play the Columbus Telephone will play the Columbia Telephone championship, tonight in the Girls' High School Hall, Pembroke street.

An interesting feature of the game, which promises to be hot right from the tap off, will be the playing of Joe Corbett against his club teammates. He works in the Columbia Machine Switching office, and has been on edge as to whether he should play for the boys or his club team, but has very diplomatically decided to play it safe, by playing for the Cathedral five in their return game on the Columbus side.

The Cathedral five will start with McKinzey and Riley as forwarding Ryan as centre, Zilmer Foley and Sullivan as the backs.

The Columbia five that will start is not yet known, but with such players as Ed Cotter, formerly of the Shawmutes; Kelley and Cahill of the St. Mary's five of Cambridge; Joe Collett, formerly of Easton Council, K. of C. champions, and now with the Cathedral five; O'Brien, formerly of St. Mark's, certainly warrants the fears of the Columbia rooters, and there are plenty of them, to feel quite confident.

CATHOLIC COLLEGE RELAY TEAMS RACE FOR CARDINAL'S CUP

CASEY MEET HAS FINE PROGRAM

Star athletes of colleges and clubs will compete in the big open indoor track meet staged by the Knights of Columbus at Mechanics Hall tonight. This will be the first of several big indoor track athletic carnivals.

The feature will be the race for the Catholic college relay championship in which three teams, those of Boston College, Georgetown and Holy Cross will contest. Georgetown has won two legs on the Cardinal O'Connel cup and the Eagles and Purple teams are determined that the Blue and Gray shall not gain permanent possession of the trophy.

Loren Murchison of the Newark A. C., champion sprinter, who has injured a few weeks ago in an auto accident seems to have recuperated, for rumor has it that he is in splendid form.

Loren Murchison

He must be for he will buck up against some wonderful talent in the sprints when he runs against Bernie Wefers, Jr., Harold "Boots" Lever, Penn flyer, and Charley Carroll, old Holy Cross star.

The Casey mile should be a whiz. Lloyd Hahn, recent conqueror of Jole Ray, will compete against George Marsters of Georgetown and Tom Cavanaugh, B. C. star.

The two-mile jaunt with R. E. Brown, former Cornell star, and Marvin Ricks, former Princeton runner, should produce exceptionally fast time. Both are stars of the first magnitude.

The forty yards hurdle contest with Carl Christenson, of the Newark A. C., pitted against Clarence Faulson, sensational Harvard freshman; Joe Sullivan of the B. A. A. and Herbert Meyer, a Newark A. C. entry, should furnish a classy timber topping event.

The high jump, with the name of Leroy Brown, national and intercollegiate champion, and holder of the world's indoor record, entered on the list can be expected to produce real Olympic stuff.

The shotput will be a big thing as Ralph Hills, Princeton star who hurled the ball 49 feet in the Stadium last year, is on hand. Earl Evans, Harvard star, and Charley Eastman, another Harvard entry will contend.

One of the classiest relay programs ever devised in Boston will be presented. The B. A. A. clashes with the Newark A. C. and Murchison will add his speedy limbs to the New Jersey outfit.

The long relay run between Harvard and Georgetown promises to be a thriller. Both are considered among the fatest teams in intercollegiate circles.

The Holy Cross freshmen will run against the B. C. freshmen and the rivalry between the two teams will make the race a treat. English High battles Boston Latin, Brown clashes with Tech., B. U. bucks against the Aggies, Tufts competes against Northeastern and the Harvard freshmen are out against the Tech cubs.

STARS IN CASEYS' MEET TONIGHT

MALINSKY BEST OF BOSTON'S AMATEURS

Boston has turned out many brilliant prospects of late years in its amateur ranks but the showing made by Mike Malinsky, the West End newsboy outshines that of any youngster to grace the square circle this season.

Mike Malinsky

The local boy has been the outstanding star in the 108 and 112-pound class all season long. At the recent Tri-City show held at Mechanics Building he suffered his first defeat in 59 fights and lost his first show in 57 tournaments.

This record is by far the best ever attained by any amateur of any weight in this or any city. Malinsky first started boxing two years ago under the careful wing of Jack Canlen. He displayed plenty of stamina in his early bouts and developed a punch that won him many fights via the K. O. route.

His parade to the pinnacle of fame has been consistent since first he put on gloves and only interrupted by Walter Davies, the Pittsburgh boxer who won the 112-pound class in the recent Tri-City bouts.

Malinsky went over to New York recently and beat the best boys in his division. He carried off first honors in the class against the best that Gotham had to offer. He duplicated this feat again at Pittsburgh when he took into camp the same Davies that broke up his string of victories.

New York, Jan. 26.—The signed contract of Hugh McQuillan, veteran pitcher, and Paul Florence, former Georgetown star, who will be given a trial as catcher, have been received by the Giants.

Trade, Brighton and M.A.H.S. Win on Ice

By FRED C. LANE.

Boston Trade School continued to pile up a lead in the District Hockey League by winning over Hyde Park 1 to 0 at the Arena today. Latin School emerged from their slump and took Mechanic Arts into camp by the same score, while Brighton beat East Boston 2 to 1.

The play today was by far the best seen at the Arena this year. The cold weather of the past week gave the boys plenty of opportunity to practise out of doors to which fact the fine team work of all six teams can be attributed.

Clarke of East Boston, considered the best individual player in the District League, was the outstanding star of the morning session. Although on the losing team, the brand of hockey displayed by this lad in combating the forces of Brighton High was remarkable.

On two occasions he skated through the Brighton team, scoring the one goal credited to his team, and was only rebuked in his second attempt by brilliant goal tending on the part of Sullivan.

Latin School gave an exhibition of team play in today's series with Mechanic Arts that was the best seen this year. After scoring in the second period, the team went on the defence and sent back all attempts by the Mechanic Arts boys to penetrate their defence.

Hyde Park's sextet did well in holding the Trade school boys to their one tally. McCormick scored the telling point on a pass from Middlebury in the closing moments of the second period.

The teams lined up as follows:

TRADE.		HYDE PARK.
Rosetos, r.w.		l.w., Lemon
Middleton, c.		c., Shea
McCormack, l.w.		r.w., Cosgrove, Hawkins
Robinson, r.d.		l.d., Antonia

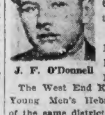
Basketball Notes



J. F. O'Donnell

J. F. O'Donnell is a very busy man these days booking basketball games for the Wander A. C. of this city. STASIAK WILL CLASH WITH ALVAREZ

Matchmaker Paul Bowser surely hit the fans right with his card arranged for his big wrestling show at the Grand Opera House next Thursday night.

Stanley Stasiak

The top card reads Stanley Stasiak, Mighty Lion of Poland vs. Joe Alvarez, the heavyweight champion of Panama, best two falls in three to a possible finish. It was originally intended to stage George Brown of Chicago against Stasiak next week but Alvarez insisted that he be given the bout as he came here for the express purpose of running Stasiak out of Boston or at least clipping his feathers.

Stanley was none to keen for the bout but pressure was brought to bear upon him and he finally consented to the match. This marks his first appearance on the mat in five weeks. Part of that time he spent in the hospital and it is certainty that when the men get together on Thursday night there will be no love lost between them.

Stasiak figures that Alvarez has been getting money and matches that really belonged to him. The fact that Panama Joe wants to make Boston his home and wrestle weekly or semi-monthly is something to make the Big Pole think over.

Ed Strangler Lewis has promised to give the winner a bout for the title at some future date.

Seldom if ever does any bout short of a world's championship affair open as much to the winner as this bout does. It's a safe bet that both boys will be ready for the battle of their lives.

DOUBLE-HEADER PACKS ARENA TONIGHT

Boston's choicest club hockey attraction is billed at the Arena tonight. All four members of the eastern division of the United States Amateur Hockey League are booked.

George Owen

B. A. A. will meet the Boston Hockey Club in one game and the Maples will battle with New Haven.

It is the first time in hockey history that the full membership of any league has played on the same ice.

There will be a tremendous crowd at the rink. Standing room will be at a premium. All reserve seats have been sold.

Fans will have a fair idea what team is in line for the Eastern title after the twin bill. It is hard to pick a winner in either game.

Although the B. A. A. will feel the loss of big Ajax Campbell who is confined to the City Hospital recovering from a severe injury sustained against the Maples, the B. A. A. will present a snappy team against the Boston Hockey Club.

Pop Conley, the veteran dribbling wizard may play part of the game for the Unicorn.

Capt. Joe Stubbs has his team in fine condition for the big test. His team is resting comfortably on the top of the league. George Owen is expected to be at his best.

All indications point to a merry jam when the Maples tackle New Haven in the other half of the bill. The Maples regard the clash as the most important of this season.

This game will furnish plenty of rugged hockey. The Maples with their finely built players are well equipped to tear loose against the Bears.

Unfortunately Capt. Normie Shay will not be in the New Haven lineup. He will direct the team from the sidelines.

ANOTHER TITLE MATCH FOR HOPPE

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Willie Hoppe, world's champion 18.2 balk line billiardist, will meet Augie Kieckhef, former three cushion champion, in a three cushion match here probably in March, according to tentative arrangements now have expressed their willingness to meet and the terms and place for the match are to be decided upon shortly.

PIONEER A. C. HAS A HEAVYWEIGHT CLASS

One of the best amateur shows ever staged in Lynn is on the bills for Feb. 1, when the Pioneer A. A. of that city puts on its tournament. As fans like to see the heavyweights in action, Louis Penny, in charge of the show, has an open novice class for that division. In addition to the open novice heavyweight class, four other classes are on the card at 112, 118, 126 and 147 pounds. Already a large list of entries have been received, including boys from Medford, Lawrence, Revere, South Boston, Milford and other stations.

DIGGINS IS A WINNER AGAINST WALTER LEE

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 26.—At the Rockingham A. C. "Porky" Diggins of Nashua defeated Walter Lee of Boston in one of the best 10-round bouts seen here in a long time.

It was a good fight all the way. "Porky" had the margin in six of the rounds. Lee went on at short notice for Joe St. Hilaire.

In the semi-final, Harry Lee, Portsmouth, stopped Young O'Neil of Lewiston in four rounds, while "Kupie" Roy of Manchester settled Bert Skillet of Quincy, Mass., in five.

Zev Defends His Stable in Teapot Oil Probe

Rancocas Farm, N. J., Jan. 26.—Zev asks the American public to "suspend judgment."

Owned by Harry F. Sinclair, lessee of Teapot Dome, and named after Col. J. W. Zevely, Mr. Sinclair's pal and $25,000-a-year attorney, the champion three-year-old of the late racing season asks the folks not to jump to conclusions before the judges hang out the numbers.

Zev calls attention to the fact that the story of $100,000 in the bag "was not pinned on our stable in any way," and expresses supreme confidence that Harry and the Colonel will come through at the end like Zev came through in his meeting with the British crack Papyrus.

CHAMPION ZEV

While the great thoroughbred will not talk for publication, everybody at the Farm has noticed that he has swung away from the Sport Columns to Page One of the newspapers and follows closely the Senate investigation of his master's lease of the navy's oil field. At times he appears to be downhearted.

No one has heard the famous horse chuckle but once in the past week. That was when he read Mr. Anderson's story about the stranger who made him a present of $25,000 and then disappeared. That made the horse laugh.

But Zev will not talk about the King mystery, either, countering every question with:

"By the way, what's become of the wire tappers?"

MR. MURPHY INSISTS HIS NAME IS TIM

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE stars of yesterday! What are they doing? Whither have they gone? If these questions are put to a man deep in wisdom of things theatrical his answer, unquestionably, will be direct and illuminating. "Working for John Golden and doing a good artistic job for a fat weekly envelope," he will say, and, if permitted to roam onward, will explain that, while new ideas in plays may be demanded by an insistent public, it requires the old ideas of advanced actors to make them artistically perfect. Which settles the case for the stars of yesterday and checks up another point on the right side of the John Golden score card. Also, it may serve as an introduction to Mr. Tim Murphy, late star of Charlie Hoyt's cheerful American farces, still later a distinguished actor-manager-producer on his own account and now with Frank Craven in "The First Year" at the Hollis. If you don't remember Tim Murphy in "The Carpetbagger," your father will. Ask him.

YOU CANNOT MAKE MR. MURPHY STRETCH HIS NAME TO ITS GRAND EXTENSION

WHEN Shakespeare penned his popular and oft-quoted question, asking what, if anything, there is to a name, he could not have foreseen that a few centuries later Tim Murphy would burst into the arena to give argument and positive assertion that a man's name may not be trifled with—even by his most loyal friends. Mr. Murphy's Christian name is Tim—not Timothy, nor Timotheus, from which Timothy grew in one of the periods of Greek literary reconstruction; nor Timanthes, nor Timoleon. Mr. Murphy began life as Tim, and he has stuck to it through many seasons of hard artistic speculation; through many bitterly fought campaigns in discouraging one-night regions of the South, and, perhaps, worse ones in the North. His friends have attempted to revise and edit Tim into Timothy—but it can't be done. It never will be done. Biographical accounts of actors are interesting only when there is novelty in the narrative. In the case of Tim Murphy the story began in the small and inconsequential town of Rupert, Vt., but anxious and doting parents decided that rural New England offered no rare opportunities for the development of youthful talent and the family moved south into Washington, where the fast-growing Tim, now stretched into six ample feet a few inches, gave indications of being a painter—not a sign painter or vulgar letterer, mind you, but a mural decorator with a classic touch and a love for his art. How good he was may be guessed from the fact that the skillful Tim worked on frescoes in the White House, the Postoffice and the the Patent Office, and once, in a spirit of adventure, he accepted a position in the Patent Office, where painful labor was performed in pen and ink on subjects peculiar to patent offices.

Charlie Hoyt has never been equalled as a humorist and philosopher, declares Tim Murphy.

WATCHED LOTTA IN "LITTLE NELL" AND STRAIGHTWAY DECIDED TO BE AN ACTOR

LET him tell his own story. "I might have remained in the Patent Office for life,' he said, "if Lotta had not dropped into Washington for a week's engagement in 'Little Nell and the Marchioness.' I saw one performance and was immediately fired with an ambition to take the drama by the throat and conquer it. Your own Lotta Crabtree knocked the spots out of any hope I may have had for a career with the brush. I began a stage career with nothing better than an assortment of imitations of well-known actors. They may have been good, and my own mind isn't settled on that point, but Tony Pastor thought well enough of them to give me an opportunity, which meant an engagement at his popular New York theatre. At that time Charles Hoyt, author of the brightest plays our stage has ever seen, was just rising into fame, and I was astonished to receive a proposal to join 'The Brass Monkey,' in which I was to play one of the razzle-dazzle trio. Otis Harlan, now in pictures and many years associated with Hoyt, and Billy Mack were my companions in the piece. That was the beginning of a warm friendship with Hoyt, so close and intimate that I spent most of my Summers at his farm in Charlestown, N. H., where he died at the comparatively youthful age of forty-two. Hoyt was one of the greatest characters our theatre has produced, and I think any one who has followed his career, or who has known him as we of his official family knew him, will admit that he was in many ways the most gifted of our writers for the theatre. He was not only a humorist—and no humor of later years has excelled the work he turned out—but he was a philosopher as well. There was an undercurrent of philosophy and humanity in every satirical line he wrote. Hoyt set a pace in American humor that has not been even remotely approached by our modern humorists."

FOLLOWING years of faithful service with Hoyt, Mr. Murphy ventured into the field of producing, but remained an actor for the love of the work. Some in this generation will recall with happy memory "The Carpetbagger," "A Bachelor's Romance" and "Old Innocence," but if you are on the easy side of forty your recollection will not be clear. "I have one distinction, anyway," smiled Mr. Murphy. "In spite of my name, I have never in my stage life played an Irish character. And please remember, my name is Tim, not Timothy—nor Timoleon."

CLUB NEWS—At a recent meeting of the proudly exclusive Full Copy Club, the resignation of John W. Lacee as corresponding secretary was accepted and, by vote of the club, official headquarters were transferred from the Shubert to the Selwyn Theatre.

THERE MAY BE MANY OTHER INTERESTING JULIETS, BUT WE'LL STICK TO JANE COWL

AN evening with Shakespeare is not always interesting—though it may yield mental nourishment. The indifferent pupil in school reads his Shakespeare not for pleasure, always, but for his own good. Of course, there are interesting heroines in the classics, but they are usually made so by the manner of their presentation. It was that way with the Juliet of Jane Cowl, which drew you to the Selwyn Theatre, held you through three long hours that seemed short, and finally sent you out into the night with a definite conviction that you had waited a good many years for this particular thrill. Of course, there have been other Juliets, but none of them we have seen have shed such lustrous, glorifying youth upon the character; there have been other well read, skillfully acted Juliets, but we fail to recall one that has struck a finer or more human note than Miss Cowl's. A rarer combination of youth, beauty and acting talent could not be imagined in these perilous days of campaigning in Shakespeare. Miss Cowl was an interesting Juliet because she made you understand the character and touched you with her emotions. Naturally, she was a feast for the eye, which proved a great help, but she also caught you with the spirituality of her performance and its splendid naturalness. It was so impressively human that you could not, if you would, escape its irresistible charm.

Scream of Terror Merely a Song

"Just how did you manage to get that blood-curdling terror in your scream in the second act?" the interviewer asked Louise Swanson, of "Whispering Wires" at the Plymouth.

"There's a funny story about that," declared Miss Swanson. "During rehearsals I soon found out that I wasn't putting that scream across as I should. Try as I might, I wasn't able to get tones I wanted. For several days I tried to find the tones I wanted, but always it was the same. Then, one afternoon, I placed an operatic record on the machine and found the note.

Audiences Often Make Mistakes

By EARL CARROLL

(Producer of "Vanities," coming to the Colonial Theatre).

There has always been a great discussion concerning the question of how much girls can or can't wear on the stage. I believe that it is not the production that is seen on the stage, but the people who see it, that should be discussed. And it is the audience that should be carefully selected, rather than the show that should be censored.

Earl Carroll

In New York, our audiences are made up of people from all over the country. When people say, "Well, of course, this doesn't shock New York, but just wait till the show goes to some of the other cities!" I feel that they are making a mistake.

After all, standards are such false things! What is quite permissible in one country is all wrong in another.

Zimbalist To Play Upon His $33,000 Violin

The second Sunday afternoon concert in the Steinert Concert Series will be given at Symphony Hall tomorrow afternoon. Efrem Zimbalist, the Russian violinist, will furnish the program. Zimbalist has been before the public a great deal lately through his acquisition of the Stradivarius violin known under the name of the "Titian," for which he is said to have paid $33,000. He will use this same violin in playing the following program: Brahms' "Sonata in D minor"; Roger's "Adagio and "Scherzo"; the "Concerto in E minor, Opus 64," by Mendelssohn; "Introduction and Tarantelle" "Spanish Dance," and the "Carmen Fantasy," by Sarasate.

Betty Compson Draws Good Laugh On The King

When Betty Compson, the popular film star, was in England she spent a day at Ascot. When King George arrived at the course, Miss Compson stared at him long and obviously through her field-glasses. Finally someone told her that it was not the thing to do.

"Ah, I see," replied Betty. "A cat may look at a king, but not through field-glasses."

This bon mot proved once again that Miss Compson is as clever as she is beautiful and that acting in the silent drama has not removed her power of speech. Miss Compson has the stellar role in "Woman to Woman," which will play at the Fenway Theatre next week, opening today.

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

COLONIAL—Earl Carroll's "Vanities," featuring Peggy Hopkins Joyce, an international beauty, and Joe Cook, who won fame with his "one-man vaudeville show." "Vanities" is a revue of spectacular type, with tableaux of beautiful girls in heavy as well as scant raiment, frolicking comedians and scenic grandeur. The entire New York company is promised.

* * *

MAJESTIC—"Polly Preferred," with Genevieve Tobin. A comedy of the movies by Guy Bolton. Tells a humorous story of a chorus girl made into a movie star by the energetic efforts of a young salesman she meets in a Broadway Automat. Supporting Miss Tobin are William Harrigan, Edward Van Sloan, William David, Mary Phillips, Harold Waldridge and Louis Haines. Produced by Comstock and Gest; directed by Winchell Smith.

SELWYN—Jane Cowl in "Antony and Cleopatra." One of the greatest and most stirring of Shakespeare's plays. Seldom produced because of the stern requirements in scenery and costumes, and because of the long list of speaking parts—thirty-six. Miss Cowl has found "Antony and Cleopatra" a satisfactory medium for the expression of her art. Rollo Peters will play the part of Antony.

FENWAY—(Opening today.) Betty Compson in "Woman to Woman." The story is laid in Paris and Miss Compson plays the part of a bewitching French dancer. For a companion piece and comedy feature there will be an "Our Gang" film, in which Hal Roach's little rascals get into amusing difficulties in "Tire Trouble."

* * *

TREMONT TEMPLE—(Opening Tuesday evening.) Longfellow's poem, "The Courtship of Myles Standish," in picture form, with Charles Ray as John Alden, Enid Bennett as Priscilla Mullins and E. Alyn Warren as Myles Standish. A romantic story of early days in the Plymouth colony, visualizing the Pilgrims' conflicts with many adversities.

* * *

SOMERVILLE—"What's Your Wife Doing?" A farce concerning the pursuit of a girl by a determined lover. No dull moments. In the cast will be found Bernard Nedell, Ann MacDonald, Frank Thomas, Leyta Cerder, Phil Sheffield and Lee Lishard.

OPERA TO BRING NEW SINGERS

Another long step toward the accomplishment of permanent opera for Boston will be taken during ... next two weeks when the most varied and brilliant season of grand opera that the city has seen in the past decade will be presented at the Boston Opera House with the entire Chicago Opera Company, its stars, chorus, ballet, orchestra, scenery, costumes and technical equipment.

Building upon the artistic success of last year the local committee of the Boston-Chicago Opera Association, selected a repertoire that would be representative of the very best that the resources of the affiliated Chicago organization had to dispose. To this end, the guarantee fund was increased by 50 per cent, and a total of something over $152,000 was pledged by persons of substance in the city to back the signatures of the committee to the contract.

LEADERS IN MOVEMENT.

Curiously enough, the majority of the leaders in the local opera movement are not of the self-seeking, or even the professional musician type. They are men of commercial and financial prestige in the community whose interest in opera arises from a desire to supply the community with everything that makes for a larger culture. These men include Walter C. Baylies, Geo. W. Brown, Henry B. Day, R. H. Bristow Draper, Edwin Farnham Greene, George C. Lee, John R. Macomber, James J. Phelan, Galen L. Stone, John M. Thayer, Jr., E. Sohier Welch and Daniel C. Wing. The managing committee is made up of Ralph L. Flanders, general manager of the New England Conservatory of Music; Wallace Goodrich and Messrs. Greene, Thayer and Welch.

The coming two weeks of Opera at the Huntington avenue home of music-drama will enable Boston to glimpse and hear pieces somewhat unfamiliar in their entirety, though endowed with great popular appeal. The monumental "Mefistofele" and "Boris Godunoff" have been lavishly mounted to frame the Russian basso, Chaliapin, in his most famous rolls.

OPENS WITH "L'AFRICANA."

After a period in which Chicago was at odds with the French music publishers concerning royalties, peace prevails once more, and the new tenor, Fernand Anseau, will be cast in operas of the French idiom, such as Charpentier's "Louise," Massenet's "Manon," and Bizet's "Carmen." A career that Boston has followed with interest will chalk up a red - letter day when Charles Hackett, who is almost Boston's own tenor, will sing in "The Barber of Seville." The newest of phenomenal coloratura sopranos, Graziella Pareto, will sing the florid aira of Rosine. Mary Garden, more happily cast than for some years past, will show the wide scope of her talents as the discontended sewing girl of the "Butte" in "Louise," the hooden Carmen, and the youth in "The Juggler of Notre Dame." Claudia Muzio, of rare beauty and luscious voice, and charming Edith Mason will be the contrasting Marguerites in "Mefistofele" and "Faust." Fair Claudia will abandon dramatic roles for the more florid "Traviata" on the second Wednesday matinee, and Miss Mason will be twice the melting Snow Maiden. Anna Ludmilla will lead the ballet in its incidental dances.

"Colorful" operas will open and close the season, with Rosa Raisa and Charles Marshall as principals. The Monday opening opera will be Meyerbeer's "L'Africana" in which the soprano is represented as a dusky African queen.—the hero, Vasco De Gama, navigator and explorer. The last Saturday will show the soprano and tenor in reversed complexions as the wronged Desdemona and the fiery Moor, Otello, respectively.

SEASON'S REPERTOIRE.

The repertoire for the first week is as follows: Monday, "L'Africana"; Tuesday, "Louise"; Wednesday matinee, "The Snow Maiden"; Wednesday night, "Barber of Seville"; Thursday, "Siegfried"; Friday, "Carmen"; Saturday matinee, "Boris Godunoff"; and Saturday night, "Faust."

The second week repertoire is as follows: Monday, "Mefistofele"; Tuesday, "The Snow Maiden"; Wednesday matinee, "La Traviata"; Wednesday night, "Carmen"; Thursday, "Boris Godunoff"; Friday, "Manon"; Saturday matinee, "Juggler of Notre Dame" and "Il Cappella," and Saturday night, "Otello."

GENEVIEVE IS REAL CHILD OF STAGE

From the wooden shoes of Brittany to the soft silken slippers of Broadway and from the whirl of the blistering war maelstrom of invaded France to the stage of the Majestic theatre are the only points of the contrasts which have come into the debutante stage career of Genevieve Tobin, the captivating Polly Brown of Guy Bolton's comedy. "Polly Preferred."

Perhaps little Genevieve Tobin had some preparation for her war experience in that she first went on the stage with all the other little Tobins as the children in David Belasco's production of "A Grand Army Man," in which David Warfield was the star. Still, to be near Mr. Warfield, even in a war story, is not exactly to gain a realization of the terrors of human conflict. And again, to wear the silk stockings of the chorus in "The Polish Wedding" was not exactly a preparation for the heavy woolens necessary to clod about in Brittany sabots.

But Genevieve Tobin experienced both before mother cut short her little girl's career before the footlights by shipping her off to the flowered fields of France to learn her correctness and polite language in a convent. Then the horde came and the little American girls were rushed to the docks and put aboard a steamer for home. Thus Genevieve found herself back to the course of her destiny—the stage.

Here Comes Polly

Genevieve Tobin

She plays the leading role in "Polly Preferred," a comedy of filmland which comes to the Majestic Monday. Miss Tobin first gained fame through her impersonation of "Pat" O'Day in the stage version of "Little Old New York."

DAVIES FILM ON FINAL WEEKS

Marion Davies in the Cosmopolitan Production, "Little Old New York," enters the final fortnight of the engagement at the Park Theatre tomorrow with the usual Sunday showings at 3.00 and 8.15 p. m. The popularity of this production exceeds any in which the beautiful star has appeared, excelling even that of her preceding picture, "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

There is special lure in the delightful plot of Rida Johnson Young's play of old New York in the 1830's. The scenes of that picturesque period have special appeal and the quaint costumes add their own particular charm. But most of all, there is the story of the daring emigrant lass who comes to this country and does much afire to insure the finding a large fortune. The experiences she endures in keeping to this impersonation are full of bright comedy and not without its thrilling incidents. The scene of the old-time prize fight has created abundant comment because of its exceedingly humorous nature.

The adherence to historical accuracy in scenes, costumes and customs bring surpassing credit to the director and to Josef Urban, who designed the story. Moreover, it is played in perfect manner by a numerous cast of leading stage and screen players including Harrison Ford, Mahlon Hamilton, J. M. Kerrigan and Courtenay Foote. Daily showings are given at 2.15 and 8.15 p. m.

Mental Wonder Will Give Public Performance

After winning the admiration of the public and bewildering the experts at Harvard University, the Swiss mentalist visiting Boston, Konradi Leitner, now finds a public performance demanded of him. This is an unusual situation for a guest of the city and it is in response to the requests of thousands of people interested in his strange powers that Mr. Leitner will give an entire evening at Jordan Hall, Friday, Feb. 1.

It is announced that he will begin the evening with a series of demonstrations in mental telepathy along the lines of those which have caused the Boston press to acclaim him a genuine telepathic marvel. In all his experiments, Mr. Leitner will use members of his audience and before the evening is over, a great many of them will have an opportunity to attest personally to the genuineness of his powers.

Clear Enunciation Comes From Vaudeville

Among the many histrionic virtues possessed by Marguerite Farrell not the least is her clear enunciation which enables a person in the furthermost row of the gallery to hear every word she says. And when she sings her ad-libs may, if they so choose, write down the words of the song, thereby saving themselves the purchase price of the sprightly

Marguerite Farrell

Miss Farrell, who is one of the principals in "Up She Goes" at the Wilbur, learned her English-like speech, curiously enough, while in vaudeville. In that sphere he who utters his speech (and she also) is loud. Mumbling and indistinct enunciation, which seems to be permissible on the legitimate stage, is barred in vaudeville. Comedians and comediennes not only work fast; but they also must make a favorable impression in fifteen or twenty-five minutes. On the legitimate stage they have two hours to win approval.

Now it goes without saying that if a person craves success in the vaudeville field that person cannot get very far by talking like a train announcer. And so, usually, what they say you can understand.

"Irene" Is Forced To Give An Extra Matinee

The success achieved by the Berkeley Comedians in "Irene" at the Arlington Square Theatre has forced the management to add an extra matinee to the regular performances already scheduled. Beginning next week there will be matinees on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Ann Milburn

Co-incident with the popularity of "Irene" as an entertainment is the fine success scored by Ann Milburn, who shares with Busby Berkeley the principal honors of the performance. Miss Milburn is a sister of Mary Milburn, who made many friends here by her work in "Molly Darling." Ann Milburn has been on the stage a comparatively short time, making her first appearance as a member of the chorus in "The Girl in the Spotlight," in which she understudied her sister. Her promotion was rapid, as things go in the theatre, and soon after "Molly Darling" left Boston she succeeded her sister in the chief role.

FOUR CONCERTS

The Eighteenth Century Orchestra with the co-operation of the recently formed Eighteenth Century Musical Association, announces four candle-light concerts, the first one of the group to be given Sunday evening, February 24, at the St. James Theatre. The Eighteenth Century Orchestra will be remembered for the interesting ancient programs offered last Winter, and which attracted so much attention among music lovers of Greater Boston.

SYMPHONY PROGRAM

The next regular pair of Boston Symphony Concerts will be given a week from next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, since the orchestra is to play in New York and Brooklyn in the coming week.

Pierre Monteux announces for the 14th program the Third Symphony of Brahms, Loeffler's "Pagan Poem" with Mette Lacroix as the soloist, and Strauss' tone poem "Death and Transfiguration."

SPECIAL CONCERTS

Symphony Orchestra will give the second pair of Young People's concerts on Saturday and Tuesday. Each concert will begin at four o'clock and will have the same program as follows:

Humperdinck's ..... Prelude to the opera, "Hansel and Gretel."
Mozart ..... Two movements from the Symphony in G minor
Wagner ..... Dance of the Apprentices and Message to Hans Sach from "The Meistersingers."
Debussy ..... Nocturne, "Festivals."
Rossini ..... Overture to "William Tell."

ARRAU, SOLOIST

The third Boston Symphony concert of the Monday evening series will take place in Symphony Hall on February 4. This concert will have a notable soloist in Claudio Arrau, the talented South American pianist, who is making his first tour of this country and who will first play in Boston on this occasion.

BOSSES BARTER MINNESOTA, SAYS JOHNSON

California Senator Demands Primary Be Called to Settle the Choice for President

Washington, Jan. 26 (I.N.S.)—Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, today protested against the contemplated calling of a convention in Minnesota to select delegates to the national convention in June.

Senator Johnson sent this telegram to Charles R. Adams, Republican state chairman, and J. S. Gould, secretary of the Republican state convention:

"I have just been advised that your convention contemplated calling a convention for the selection of delegates to the Republican national convention. I very earnestly protest against this action.

"In common with all free Republicans I insist the rank and file of the Republican party have the right to nominate or at least participate in the nomination of the Republican candidates for president; and the Republicans of Minnesota should be accorded that right.

"I ask that the Republican state committee call a primary and let Minnesota Republicans express their choice for president.

"I seek no advantage. I ask no favors. I do demand in this contest just one thing, the decision of Republicans, not of Federal officials or bosses, and that the Republicans shall have the opportunity to render their decision and express their preference. Less than this the trustees of teh party in Minesota or elsewhere ought not and cannot in fairness and decency deny.

"If be common gossip that the great State of Minesota has been bartered and delivered in Washington by one of the Republican bosses. Whether they can make the delivery or not, there can be no honest objections to a fair primary and a free expression of the rank and file of the party, the men and women upon whom the Republican party must rely for success.

"It is my right to ask this. It is the right of Minnesota Republicans to have it. It is your duty to grant it."

Moscow, Jan. 26 (I.N.S.)—Despite the outward appearance of unity [illegible] the Communist Party which [illegible] immediately followed the death of Nicolai Lenine, there were indications today that fresh dissensions in the Imperial Party [illegible] are arisen and that there will be a bitter struggle between the Communist "Old Guard" and the Trotzky [illegible] ems for control of the govern[illegible]

Threatens to Quit Movies Unless Financial Cloud Is Lifted From Her

"A few months ago, my father was here and was on the verge of a nervous breakdown as a result of his financial situation. Mother pleaded with me to sign four blank notes, but to ease my father's mind, and those notes were then to be destroyed.

"Both mother and I knew, as did [illegible] that I had no funds, as all [illegible] earnings up to that time had gone to father as my guardian.

It was understood by all that notes were not to be used [illegible] and I do not know today who is responsible for having [illegible] them in and negotiated them. ESCAPED CONVICT IS HUNTED

Clever Crook Turns $1 Notes Into Tens; Passes Them in Lodging Houses

A bill-raiser, believed to be an escaped convict from the Federal prison at Atlanta, is being sought by the Boston police, the man having passed several raised bills on rooming house keepers here within the past few days.

Byram Leper, alias Charles Straile, fifty-seven, is the man the police are looking for.

Leper is described as weighing 135 pounds, of medium height and dark complexion. He wears a soft hat and dark suit and overcoat. The man escaped from the Federal prison where he was sent for a similar offence and the workmanship on the raised bills here is identical with the handiwork of Leper, who is known to have come to this section.

How to Keep Well

By DR. F. X. MAHONEY
Boston Health Commissioner

BEWARE of improperly cooked pork in any guise

The highly seasoned salami, the toothsome sausages and the mouth-fried pork pudding are likely to cause suffering and death unless the pork therein contain has been thoroughly sterilized. This sterilization is brought about through one agency—heat.

Dr. Mahoney.

Pork that has been cooked to 160 degrees F. is absolutely safe for human consumption.

Pork that has not been sterilized is liable to contain the trichinae parasite. This parasite, taken into the human body in sufficient numbers, causes trichinosis, a disease that has many of the symptoms of typhoid fever and in many instances proves fatal.

TRICHINOSES SYMPTOMS

Within the past few days [illegible] cases of typhoid fever were reported to the Boston Department of Health. One of the victims died. A day or two later, [illegible] more cases were reported from the hospital.

The law of averages would not stand of so many cases of typhoid under such conditions. A careful diagnosis was made in all the cases, all the modern [illegible] being applied. At the conclusion of these tests the health and hospital authorities were agreed that the patients were suffering from trichinosis and not typhoid.

The disease first makes its presence known with [illegible] constipation or diarrhea, followed by swelling of the eyelids. The muscles of the face and body are attacked with severe pain. There is no paralysis, but the temperature of the sufferer often rises to 105.

COOK THOROUGHLY

There are certain religious [illegible] upon the use of pork as an article of food. The superstition originally formed as a sanitary measure.

All pork should be cooked until the tissue has turned white. When pork is served with red tissue, although it does not [illegible] the possibilities of trichinosis, the disease parasite.

If the various bolognas and sausages have been made of properly inspected pork, they [illegible] but the possibilities [illegible] the average of whether the [illegible] have been properly cooked. Therefore the only safe method is to cook such foods before they are eaten.

Salami and kindred foods are [illegible] dishes with persons of Italian extraction and for that reason trichinosis is found more frequently among persons of foreign extraction, as was the case of those [illegible] and suffering from the malady in Boston.

100 of Constabulary Rushed From Manila to Disperse Fanatics on Islands

Manila, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—One hundred constabulary troops left Manila today on the Coast Guard Cutter Pollio for Surigao to reinforce a contingent of constabulary troops which has been attempting to disperse religious fanatics in that region.

The situation among the fanatics of Surigao Province and nearby islands is growing worse, according to dispatches received at the office of Governor-General Wood.

Colonel Bowers, constabulary commander of Surigao, has wireless ed that two constabulary lieutenants with thirty-three men, have established themselves outside the town of Placer.

The lieutenants, Colonel Bowers said, reported that more than 200 fanatics near the town were threatening to kill all officials. Colonel Bowers said he would attempt to disperse the fanatics who have cut the telegraph lines.

He said there was a movement among small bands of fanatics to create disturbances throughout Northern Surigao, which may spread through the provinces of Agusan and Leyte.

In addition to the troops sent from Manila Bay today another constabulary company has been sent to Surigao from Ligan, about 300 constabulary troops are in Surigao now.

WOOLENS NOW OFFER FINE INVESTMENT

W. M. Wood Concern's Advantages Compiled by Johnson and Co.

The American Woolen Company, by virtue of its splendid record achieved through farsighted policies of the executives who brought the company through that period of depression which wrecked so many textile corporations, now stands forth as one of the most successful in the woolen industry.

Economical and efficient manufacturing methods, the company's strong financial position, and the fact that the company was [illegible] to enjoy the benefits of the Fordney tariff bill are all factors which have contributed to the American Woolen Company's success.

If you are interested in the American Woolen Company from a conservative standpoint, and you desire to know the facts which have made it one of the most successful in the woolen industry, you should write to Johnson & Co., 15 State street, Boston, for their latest descriptive literature concerning the financial standing of the company. This company has stood the test of time. American Woolen Company was one of those "in the know" who were aware that there was a boom on its way.

IS "GIFT ENDED."

There is much to be said for the American Woolen Company. A New England industry that has acquired those New England business characteristics of rock-bottom stability, general dependability and efficient but broad-minded management. The company offers a fine conservative investment, as "hedged" as anything it can be desired.

The American Woolen Company is doing a good business. Sales have been made during the past months, and business continues to warrant the prospect that will put the company on a good basis during the coming six months.

The market for raw wool has been active. Prices have risen with much competitive buying. This promises an increase in prices for woolen goods, with a resulting benefit for the American Woolen. The end value of the finished goods all really depends on how [illegible].

BIG 1923 BUSINESS.

During the first half of 1923, the American Woolen Company did a rushing business. Its output was very taxed to their utmost and this very probable that the report for the 1923 year, soon to be issued, will reflect this proof of prosperity in larger profits than most people anticipate.

It might be well to mention that the American Woolen Company has no funded debt with the exception of a small issue of bonds, the payment of which it guarantees. Such a situation places a wealth of assets back of the preferred stock and the preferred stock is entitled to one of the best ratings as an investment issue.

This same lack of bond issues and the lack of any requirements for bond interest, gives the common stock a security not possessed by most common stocks. American Woolen common can rightly be classed as a business man's investment paying 7 per cent cash in dividends and giving a yield of around 9 per cent at the present price. Considering general market conditions, and considering conditions with the company, the common stock seems to possess unusual speculative possibilities during the coming months.

The holders of American Woolen are now with funds to invest would do well to send for Johnson & Co.'s analysis of this New England investment.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

You may have gasped when you read how lightly Edward L. Doheny talked about handling out more than a million dollars in loans and in assistance to friends. Mr. Doheny's generosity is well known. For example, it is understand that he tips every person who serves him and his family in any way while staying in hotels, a dollar each for every day of their stay, the list including telephone operators, bellboys maids, elevator operators—anyone and everyone rendering the slightest service.

Doheny has always had unusual ideas about money. After many years' wandering as a prospector, he "struck it rich" two or three times, but in each case he disposed of his property "after there was nothing left to do but sit back and pull in the coin," as he once expressed it to me years ago. While, of course, I know nothing about the $100,000 loan to his old time chum, Albert Fall, I have known personally of other instances where Doheny handed out lavish financial assistance to friends

Nothing can be said with certainty about the cause of millionaires. When Andrew Carnegie distributed many millions of dollars among the men of millions John W. Gates of Wall Street fame, was another man "touched" right and left. The late J. P. Morgan, in his later years, was so easily separated from his money that his family was inclined to become alarmed.

William Rockefeller Thompson, who has made a vast fortune in mining and other enterprises, also uses money most generously for charitable purposes and for the happiness of friends. Coleman Du Pont doubtless could match Dodge's record of having handed out more than a million dollars to help cure over a mile. J. Leonard Replogle, the steel master, is in the same category.

Dwight Morrow of Morrow & Co. has just returned to Wall Street. Charles H. Sabin is not far behind. I know of delightful instances of his generosity and charitableness. W. C. Durant is another man who cares nothing about accumulating money for himself, but has what he wants of same.

Frank A. Vanderlip spends more of his time in thinking up beneficial ways of using his money than in spending how to make more. The same can be said of young John D. Rockefeller.

One wealthy man I know is classified as such because he has a million dollars or more in his personal account. Another is rated as wealthy because he has a million dollars invested in his business. STELLA DALLAS

By Olive Higgins Prouty

New and Intensely Interesting Serial of a Marriage of an Educated Man to an Untutored Woman

HOW THE STORY STARTED

Stella Dallas and her husband, Stephen, do not live together. They have a daughter, thirteen years old, named Laurel, who stays most of the year with the mother. They visit a Summer hotel in New England, where the other guests look askance at the painted, overdressed elder woman. The time has come for Laurel to visit her father in New York. He meets her at the station and takes her to a hotel. She goes to visit Mrs. Morrison. The story now segues back to the marriage of Stephen and Stella at Milhampton. Stella starts a flirtation with Alfred Munn. The leading women of the town begin to drop her. Stephen, deciding he can never go back to her, starts a divorce suit. The story then goes back to Mrs. Morrison's marriage to her aged millionaire suitor. The latter dies and Stephen confesses his love to the widow. Stella and Laurel get in with a society set at a Summer hotel and Laurel goes canoeing with Richard Grosvenor. Laurel overhears remarks about her mother and they leave the hotel. Stella has a plan.

"SHE'S married Alfred Munn, father," said Laurel to Stephen, and after a pause again, "She's married Alfred Munn," as if the tolling bell had changed its note.

Helen touched Laurel gently on her shoulder. "Come upstairs to your room now," she said. "We'll talk about it in the morning. I'm going to give you some food and put you to bed now."

"Father, you knew him. You couldn't stand him either. I understand how I was. Of course you couldn't. It was hell. I couldn't live with her myself."

"Don't talk so hard, Lollie," said Stephen.

"Don't call me Lollie!"

"Don't suffer so, dear."

"I'm not suffering. I'm not suffering at all."

"Will you help up Laurel's suitcase, Stephen?" asked Helen. "Come, Laurel." She slipped a steadying arm through Laurel's. "You must go to bed now."

They mounted together to the first floor front room, which Helen had told Stella last Summer would be Laurel's. ("She'll be sleeping in that, I suppose," Stella had remarked, from the threshold of the room as she had gazed upon the cool fresh and up with muslin walls and canopy. "I'll be thinking of her in that," and she had wiped her eyes.)

Helen recalled the scene, the scene, the voice, the tears, as now she set about preparing with her own hands the waiting bed for that absent woman's child.

Behind her Laurel was standing, here, as down stairs impassive and indifferent, just where Helen had left her when she withdrew her arm that had guided her father.

"Mother married a man I hate!"

"Come. We'll undress now." "Mother has married a man I hate," Laurel took up the interrupted motif again. "She's married a man she doesn't like! She has chosen him instead of me. She has married Al Munn. He's awful. He's horrible. He gossips around with servants. You've seen him. Mother's fooled us. She's been wanting Al for years to marry him."

On her knees Helen said: "Yes, dear, I see. Read that. Read that."

She drew from the bosom of her dress, and passed it to Helen.

"Do you want me to?"

Helen sat down on the foot of the bed and opened the folded sheets. The letter had been written by Stella in pencil, carelessly, in haste apparently. It was read by Helen slowly, painstakingly, as if it had been written in blood. She read it twice. Afterward she looked up at Laurel.

Laurel gave a little shrug. "You see——"

"Yes, I think I see," said Helen slowly.

"I thought it was for me she gave father the divorce, so I could come and be with you. And it made me glad. It made me proud. But I was mistaken. It was for him. It was to marry him, that creature. He's her kind, down underneath.

"She is his kind. She chose him. Father's right. The others are right. I'm the one who's been wrong about her all this time. Oh, Mrs. Morrison, she's killed my respect for me, and she knew she would. We have been quarreling about that man for weeks. She knew she would! But she didn't care. She didn't care!" Thus pitifully Laurel sank her sharp young teeth into the hand that hurt.

Helen murmured: "Greater love hath no woman than this."

Laurel didn't hear her. "I'm very unhappy. Mrs. Morrison," she wailed dully.

Helen replied. "You are very tired. You need sleep. Don't fasten behind."

Very tenderly, as if she were handling a precious body from which life had departed, Helen unfastened Laurel's dress. She slipped it off her shoulders. It fell to the floor. Bare-armed,

RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

IN our love and our laughter, in our work and our play, in the plans and the hopes which we borrow, in the tasks at our hand that are waiting today, in the dreams that we dream for the morrow, in our waking and sleeping, our hours of peace, in our moments of sadness or rapture, in the joy that comes ringing at sorrow's ear ease, in the burden we never can capture, and on each winding way that our steps yet have known past the rose, or the briar that tore us, it is well we can know that we are not alone, other feet trod the pathway before us. No, we are not alone in our measure of mirth, in our gladness and light-hearted laughter, for they have been shared by all men upon earth, as has love, with its dreams trailing after. Not alone do we go through the valley of tears where the white mist of sorrow is lying; not alone must we pass down the road of the years, not alone in our living or dying. For all human kind go on the trail that is ours, in our trials and triumphs they're sharing in our work and our worries, our songs and our flowers, all men tread on the way we are faring. If we rise or we fall we need never feel but that some one will see, comprehending; others souls pressing close to us year after year till we come to the long journey's ending.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

THIS is the time of the year when a lot of people discontinue taking their cold baths in the morning. Of course, a good many of us keep right on living about it.

A COLD shower is a wonderful thing even if you don't take it.

ICE water is just as comfortable as any other kind providing you heat it first.

DOCTORS claim that a cold shower is the best thing in the world to make you sick. Maybe this is so, but most of us are contented to stick to the old-fashioned alarm clock.

SOME guys don't mind a cold bath in the morning so long as they take a hot water bottle in the tub with them.

YOU can sweep up and down that you indulge in a cold shower every morning because, after all, who can prove to you you don't?

UP to the present time a bath is a bath.

ALL you've got to do to take a stick and splash a lot of water on the floor make your teeth chatter for five minutes and then you're a hero to everybody in the house.

OF course if your conscience hurts you to take a drink a glass of ice water with your breakfast.

ONE guy proved to his wife that he wasn't afraid of cold by eating cold salad and cold ham and eggs.

A NEW YORK man had an interior decorator put the room to resemble that of a North Pole.

THE outside of the tub was frosted with ice and the inside with icicles, but the man was filled with warm water.

ONCE-OVERS

DO NOT MAKE LIFE TOO SOFT FOR YOUR CHILDREN.

Because you had a hard time in your youth are you not inclined to be over-solicitous in your efforts to protect your children from hardships?

Because you had to do without much, you naturally desire impossible in your own children by giving everything possible to that child.

Because you had to work early and late, in season or out of season to pay your own food and keep, even as a youngster, you are sparing your own children and making them lazy.

Are you not providing that boy or that girl of yours with too much money and with too good clothes?

You grumble a little at the demands made upon you, but you accede to their wishes for additional money for unnecessary purposes.

That boy or that girl has learned that you will finally come to his or her aid when it comes to handing out the money so constantly that the limit you set as necessary, when they entered college, is being overreached, to whose detriment?

You want to be kind, so you do not refuse, and so you are really injuring your family by weakness in this respect.

It gets a child into bad habits, expensive habits, as a habit forming age to allow too much money to allow a set limit to be exceeded.

COUNT TEN BEFORE

A small town pet recently had a notice of his death published in order to find out what critics thought of his work. After reading the criticisms the disillusioned bard tied a flatiron around his neck and jumped into the river.

One of the evils of existing social conditions is that financial worth is accepted as a substitute for worth to the community.

Pedestrian who was lectured by reformer said he couldn't keep up with the times because he was too busy keeping up with the traffic.

SHIP-TO-SHORE INTERFERENCE FALLS OFF

For More Than a Week the Broadcasting Has Been Free of These "Breaks"

No interference has been caused to broadcasting by ship-to-shore communication.

This indicates another practical result in the Boston American's campaign to eliminate such interference.

The last date on which any ship-to-shore transmission on 450 meters was logged between 5 and 11 was January 17.

Particularly noticeable is the fact that WSA, the East Hampton, N. Y., station of the Independent Wireless Telegraph Company, has refused messages on 450 meters, and has even expressly requested ships to reply on some other non-interfering wave-length.

Last night showed poor reception conditions, although code interference was not great.

Rotten Meat

Editor Boston American:

The Boston American should take action to put out of business those dealers who are too mean or to sell rotten meat around the market district.

The concerns that do this illeliminate business are to be located in rat holes of cellars. Many of the refrigerators in the cellars during Blackstone street need a good cleaning out. The dealers keep growing bolder. Some approach a rich man's cellar the other day were putrid and the marketman actually had them up for sale.

Plums for Policemen

Editor Boston American:

Let us hope that Chief General Butler and Philadelphia of promotion to policemen who kill holdup men is not extended to Boston. Some of our policemen would be generals within a week, not because they are of murderous inclination, but because the scope of such action is unlimited.

F. J. GRADY.

Landlords' Obligations

Editor Boston American:

Not that we delight in the troubles of others, but it is surely a step in the right direction for a court to give a slightly jail term to a landlady guilty of supplying poor sanitation and insufficient heat. This class unable to afford luxuries is just as much entitled to proper sanitation and heat as the rich, being more of worldly goods. Just as long as persons aspire to be landlords just that long should they be compelled to give the service to which renters are entitled.

Some of the brainest men in the business world are to be found in Boston. This I have found out since leaving the army.—Maj.-Gen. J. B. Harbord.

Many Mexican Indians

And Some Other Things

Copyright, 1924, Star Co.

In the heading you read that 1,500 Mexican soldiers crossed into Texas to enter Mexico at a point advantageous for fighting the rebels. Farther down you find that the fifteen hundred Mexican soldiers were fifteen hundred Mayo Indians. This reminds you of one trouble in Mexico. More than three-quarters of the Mexican nation are Indians.

Many of the fourth quarter are half-breeds. A handful of whites manage the Mexican nation. Ambitious men among the whites struggle for power, the illiterate Indians and half-breeds are used in these fights—and the nation as a whole suffers.

The people of the United States paid something over seven billion four hundred million dollars in taxes in 1922, not quite seventy dollars for every man, woman and child in the United States.

That's too much. A great deal is waste and much of it unnecessary. Millions would be saved if this nation were not afraid of war; other millions would be saved if the people were free of crime and dishonesty and could get along without prisons, policemen, courts. We spend most of our money to check savagery within ourselves, and a little bit of it to improve the country with education, good roads, etc.

Count Ilya, son of the great Tolstoy, prophesies that Bolshevism is dead in Russia and that a republic is coming. Certainly Trotzky seems to have lost much of his popularity, and Lenin, now dead, was of late more a venerated name than an active force.

Conditions are bound to change rapidly in Russia, for this important reason. The Bolshevik government is teaching all the Russians to read.

When the Bolshevists came into power more than three-quarters of the people were unable to read or write.

That made it easy to handle them.

They gave the land to the peasants. And then the Bolshevists could say to the peasants, "If you bring back the Czars and the nobility you will lose your land," as Napoleon used to say to the French, who got their land in the revolution, "If you bring back the Bourbons you will lose your land."

Teaching all Russia to read may prove to be the fatal mistake that will dethrone Bolshevist power. When men can read they can think with the facts before them. That makes it harder for the few to control many. Our slave owners of the old days understood that and proved it when they made it a crime to teach a slave to read.

The papers say that Rudyard Kipling helped his cousin, Prime Minister Baldwin, to write speeches defending the Tories and protection for England in the campaign. In one speech Mr. Baldwin talked about "the soul of England." That is supposed to be a Kipling touch.

Writing speeches for others to deliver is an old, interesting occupation. George Harvey used to do it when he was a very young man. Once when he went fishing he left for one friend in the Senate two speeches, one to be made in case the Senator won, the other in case he lost.

Increase in Fares

Citizens Affected by the Raising of Rates Should Take Advantage of Reconsideration of Utilities Commission

It never hurts any man or any body of public men to acknowledge a mistake and to reverse an action if they are convinced that a mistake has been made.

The Department of Public Utilities has lost less prestige by reconsidering their action in the railroad rates case than by standing obstinately by an action which private reconsideration makes them believe was wrong either in substance or in form.

But now that the Department of Public Utilities is going to reopen the case, the citizens affected by the increase had better wake up and take full advantage of all their rights and opportunities. There was a time when these powerful public service corporations could tax the people to any extent for the expenses of waging a fight to raise their charges against the public, while the cities and towns where the people lived were not allowed to raise one cent to defend their citizens. All this has been changed THROUGH THE EFFORTS OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN. It was not so long ago that this happened.

It was a hard fight to pass this law, and now this newspaper would like to see the citizens of the State intelligent and active enough to take full advantage of it. Let them organize in their towns and cities and let them see that proper counsel represent them. Let them understand that lawyers alone will not be sufficient. They must be able to make statistical inquiries and research.

If the railroads need this increase, and it is not their fault that they need it, and it is proper to make the increase in their revenue in this way, then we take it that no one will object. But if they do not need the increase, or if their need for it arises out of some mismanagement or worse, or if this is not the proper way to obtain a needed increase, then it ought to be fought vigorously all along the line.

Too Much for a Corpse

Mr. Bok's $50,000

Copyright, 1924, Star Co.

Mr. Bok, with good intentions and ridiculous results, offered $100,000 for a peace plan. Now he must go before the Senate and explain what kind of propaganda he was running.

So far as Mr. Bok is concerned, it wasn't any propaganda, merely a desire to sit in the limelight for a little while, do some good if he could and pay a fair price.

But somebody pulled the strings that worked innocent Mr. Bok. His committee of seven to decide which was the best plan included six avowed candidates of the dead and buried League of Nations.

It was like offering $100,000 for "the best religion" and appointing a committee with six Baptists and one Christian Scientist. What chance would Christian Science and the other cults have had?

LISTEN, WORLD! -:- By Elsie Robinson

J. C. OTIS, JR., has only inhabited this sphere for a brief fourteen years, but he has made good use of his time. When it comes to applying progressive business principles to daily life young J. C. O. leads 'em all. For instance, there's this revered domestic sport entitled Making Dad Pay Up. Countless generations of dads have offered their heirs yens, kopecks, wampum, rupees, shillings and dimes if they'd "burn up them leaves in the back lot." And, the leaves being burned, countless generations of dads have forgotten to come across. Of course in the long run the Heirs got even. They borrowed Dad's safety razor to shave the Airedale or snitched his pet toga for a circus tent. Which was thrilling but in the long run unsatisfactory, for Dad usually failed to regard it as a fair business deal.

Realizing all this, J. C. Otis, Jr., decided to run the home on progressive lines. Just before Christmas Dad took advantage of the pre-Santy enthusiasm and kept the hope of the house of Otis busier 'n a bird dog, doing chores. But when it came time for paying up, Dad, true to the immorial precedent, was short of change. A little thing like that didn't bother Dad. Not so sonny. Three times he asked. Three times he met the same excuse. The next night on returning home, Father Otis saw a delighted mob parked before his door. Parading up and down was the source of the entertainment, Young J. C. Otis bearing a placard—"THIS HOUSE IS UNFAIR TO LABOR." For the first time in human history the Kid had boycotted the Old Man. And the Old Man paid.

Funny, isn't it? But suppose your youngsters take the hint! Just how well do you keep promises to young Bill and Ed and little Susy? Is YOUR house "fair to labor"? You grumble a good bit about the money you spend on the youngsters and their incessant demands. Have you ever thought what it would cost you to hire the steps taken which they take for you, the errands run, the messages carried? You promise glibly enough when you ask them to undertake these commissions. But do you keep your promise? A bargain's a bargain. How do you expect them to keep their bargains if you refuse to keep yours? It's a new angle to the question, isn't it?

Editor Helping Hand:

I am sick in bed. My sixth child was born Monday night, and I have no clothes for my baby to put on, and the other children are also badly in need of clothes. Little Girl Without Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a little girl five years old and a kind lady is writing this for me because I can't write. She said that one time you helped her and maybe you will help me. They took my mama away to the hospital a long time ago, and now I guess she won't come back any more. My papa was in the big war and then when he came home he was sick and he died when I was a little baby. I have not got any clothes at all to wear except some new shoes and rubbers and stockings a kind lady bought me because my shoes had holes in them. This lady that is taking care of me is poor, too, because she has a crippled hand and has a papa who is an old man and always sick. Won't you please ask some lady who has a little girl that has some clothes she doesn't wear if I may have them? I will say a prayer and ask our Lord and Our Mother Mary to bless her. VIVIE.

DR. FRANK CRANE ON ELIMINATION IS NECESSARY

By Dr. Frank Crane

ELIMINATION is absolutely essential to Life.

It is generally supposed that the most important thing in life is to get something to eat. Equally important, however, is to get rid of waste.

Unless this waste is thoroughly and regularly removed, disease sets in promptly. Nine-tenths of our physical ailments are due to defective elimination.

The same thing is true of the mind. The trouble with most minds is not that they are empty, but that they are clogged. The most ignorant and stupid man is not the one that knows the fewest things; he is the one who knows the most things that are not so.

The art of education is to get rid of misinformation, quite as much as to acquire new information.

The same thing is true of the spirit. Man's struggle upward is an effort to eliminate the degrading superstitions and fears that have hampered his soul. He needs not only to believe new truths; he equally needs to quit believing old lies.

The same thing is true of government. A nation's past gives it great momentum. It is well to have a long history and fine traditions.

But a nation does not have sound life unless it can discard traditions that have become useless and shelve precedents that are no longer helpful.

China is the oldest nation in the world. This antiquity is a thing to be proud of, and there is a great deal of force and dignity that can come from its consideration. But China can have no vigorous life until it learns how to discard outworn ideas and senseless customs.

A tree to be vigorous must have not only a hard, thick and rugged trunk, but must put on new green leaves every year.

Not only in China, but in Europe and America as well, the Past keeps choking the Present. Europe today is choked with a lot of sentimental nationalism, superstition and other stuff that is a holdover from medievalism.

France and Germany are hating each other in the same old absurd way of the Guelphs and Ghibellines. The real population of France is in reality a fellow sufferer with the real population of Germany. All the hate between them is governmental and artificial.

All the armies and navies of the world are but waste matter which some day the common sense of the world is going to get rid of. As long as they exist we may expect the body politic to have all manner of diseases.

The world needs purging.

The house of humanity needs a good dose of soap and water, needs sweeping and dusting to clean out the vermin and the dirt, the detritus of the past.

Ideas and things that were good for our fathers and grandfathers may or may not be good for us. If we are to grow we must learn to get rid of that part of the past which is useless.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON AGE OF UNIVERSE

By Garrett P. Serviss, Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

THE recent increase in the scientific estimates of the age of the little earth boil on which we go whirling through space are simply enormous. Instead of twenty million years, which Lord Kelvin thought quite enough, some of them now talk of ten billion years!

Of course this is not one of the data (sure things given) of science, but it is one of its most deliberate guesses, based on the latest work in chemistry, physics, geology and astronomy. Ten billion years! In comparison with that stupendous duration, the traditional lapse of time since Adam's appearance is as a single minute to three whole years.

But we get another jolt from the estimates made of the age of the visible universe as a whole, or of the galaxy. Says Professor William D. MacMillan: "These results are not sufficient to enable us to compute the age of the galaxy, but they are sufficient to indicate something of the order of magnitude of its age. It can hardly be less than thousands of billions of years, and it seems much more probable that it is of the order of millions of billions of years."

Along with these vast estimates of the age of the universe has gone a similar expansion of the ideas of astronomers concerning the size of the system of the stars, which we call the stellar universe. The galaxy is the main framework of the stellar system.

Not long ago ten thousand parsecs, or even five thousand parsecs, was considered a sufficient estimate of the diameter of the galaxy. Now it is put provisionally at a hundred thousand parsecs, at the least. But a single parsec (the distance of a star showing a parallax of one second of arc is over nineteen trillions of miles! If a new star should suddenly spring into existence a hundred thousand parsecs distant from the earth its light would not get to us in less than 300,000 years! Yet it reaches us from the sun in about eight and a third minutes.

The internal motions of the stellar system, i. e., the motions of the stars with reference to one another, imply a mechanism adequate for the system as a dynamic organism. Under the influence of their combined attractions upon one another the stars are continually moving, but the enormous distances that divide them call for equally enormous lapses of time in order that anything like regular oscillatory movement should be produced. There are reasons for thinking that close encounters between moving stars play an essential part in the dynamical life of the universe.

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS

FRENCH FLAG TO THE NORTH

By Temple Manning

THAT the French Republic owns land as near the United States as the Gulf of St. Lawrence is a fact that few people remember. There are two islands in the gulf, St. Pierre and Miquelon, where the tricolor still flies and where the ideals of old France still prevail. The sight of French soldiers in horizon blue going through the State of Maine was one of the inexplicable sights of the war to those who did not know that France had called upon her remote colony for its quota and the islands had responded.

The French fishermen were among the first to discover that the Grand Banks of Newfoundland provided the most marvelous fishing grounds in the world. When England required that France surrender Canada after the disastrous war of 1765, all that France was able to retain were these two little islands as a landing place for their fishing fleet to get fresh vegetables and supplies and bait after their long journey across the Atlantic to the banks.

Accordingly the two islands are still headquarters for the Winter fleets of the French fishermen. Since prohibition many American and Canadian fishing vessels have found it a desirable place to seek shelter, since the wines of France and the other liquors of the country may be found in abundance.

There are no hotels, but there are a few little cafes where the French culinary gifts enable appetizing meals to be turned out with scant materials. The French language spoken there is hardly understood by persons who learned it in Paris, since most of the inhabitants and fishermen also are Bretons. The Bretons are remnants of a race still found in the west of Ireland, mountains of Wales and highlands of Scotland, the ancient Gaels. And the Gaelic tongue is a common means of communication for the Scotch and Irish fisherfolk who foregather in the tiny saloons with the bearded Breton fisherfolk from across the seas.
